YELLOW JACKET SOCCER BLOG

October 11, 2016

The Blog, "A tradition unlike any other."

This past week was another filled to bursting with practice, games, classes, homework, exams, and the massive iceberg of camaraderie that I've only been able to show you the tip of in the blog. Those of us who had the stomach bug have recovered pretty well, but it still kinda feels like E.T. is in my belly trying to phone home every now and then. More importantly, with the exception of Paulo none of the other guys caught what we had, which we're all happy about.

At this point we've been here for about a month and a half and we're all still alive, breathing (with the possible exception of Mikey "pack-a-day" Auld, who's fighting something nasty and sounds like he's inhaling through a kazoo), and better for being here. We're officially halfway through the season so I think I'll give a sort of informal progress report. I have no particular plan of attack and do not plan on going about it in an especially effective or specific way, but I want you to keep one thing in mind - like the freshman class, it could be worse.

Some specifics...

...About the freshmen. Mason, the freshman who came in with a mop on his head, got a real haircut and looks almost like an adult now. No such luck with the Kiwi thus far. TJ seems like he'd make a great homemaker. Levi makes everyone kinda uncomfortable because he's always smiling. Brian is still quiet and musclebound. Carter actually bought a pair of bricks to wear on his feet to practice. Turns out I've been right about them so far. It really could be a lot worse.

...About the sophomores. We still don't really understand how Derek works. If you do, some pointers would be great. Coach Knight actually used the words "baby giraffe" to describe Bryce this weekend, which made my heart happy. Papi actually sits with us at meals sometimes now and occasionally even talks. It's weird.

...About the juniors. Still on the lookout for Sean's lips. If seen, please send to Brock 2 East. Smoker's family has been in town so he's been eating real food from the outside world, which makes for a happy, healthy Smokey. Schwien shaved his mustache and looks like a normal functioning member of society again, which is nice, but I don't know if it's a good thing. Something about pigs and lip-stick...But I digress.

...About the seniors. Brad seems to have left his upper lip in the same place Sean misplaced his. Twinem and JB are still engaged (if life were March Madness, I think it'd be fair to say those are two major Bracket-Busters). Paulo hasn't been deported yet and still has a very rational hatred for the cold. We're all still generally pretty clueless about what the future holds and definitely not worried at all about the fact that the real world is screaming toward us like a freight train with no brakes. Not one bit.

I've said it before and I'll say it again - life as a Yellow Jacket is a roller coaster. There have been highs and lows, bumps and turns, and it's been all we could do to keep our arms and legs inside the vehicle. The thing about roller coasters though, is that when you're in the thick of it, life is a blur. Every once in a while at the top of a hill you get to stop and enjoy the view and see for miles in every direction, but then you start picking up speed and your immediate concerns become the person next to you and whether or not this rickety old thing is going to stay on its tracks for the next few fractions of a second. When you eventually cruise in to the end of the ride you can hardly believe what just happened and that you not only made it out in one piece, but you actually think you'd totally do it all over again without changing a thing. And you look at the person who was on the ride next to you. And that person looks back at you. And you both feel like you've known the other as long as either of you has been alive. And you both know that no one else could really understand what you just went through together because they weren't strapped into that seat with a stomach full of butterflies on the way up a hill that no one should ever even attempt to ascend wondering what in the world they were thinking ever getting on the ride. And there's a bond. Maybe not permanent and maybe not perfect, but you made it through alongside this person and because of that, you're one step closer to being family. That's what's been going on on the team and that's how I would describe this season so far. It's been more than I ever could have hoped in some ways and less than I would have hoped in others, but the bond that we have as brothers on this team has continued to grow and strengthen in the face of, and in the wake of, the dives, dips and turns of this season.

This week we've got two more big conference games and fall break, which is just. So. Exciting. Will I personally do anything exotic or exciting during those two days off? The odds aren't great, but I couldn't care less because who doesn't love a four-day weekend?

Go Jackets!

TONIGHT'S GAME

The Cedarville University men's soccer team hosts the Salem International University Tigers in a non-conference game tonight at Yellow Jacket Field.

Cedarville is currently 5-6-1 overall including a 2-1 Great Midwest Athletic Conference (G-MAC) win over visiting Alderson Broaddus on Saturday night.

The Tigers, former members of the G-MAC, are 4-5-1 in 2016. SIU posted a 2-1 victory against Seton Hill on Monday in Salem, West Virginia.

The Yellow Jackets are under the direction of fourth-year Head Coach Brett Faro (47-17-9).

2015 G-MAC Offensive Player of the Year and fifth-year forward Connor Gilmour leads the Jackets with four goals for eight points and is fourth all-time at CU with 47.

Sophomore midfielder Bryce Childers is second on the squad with three goals and an assist for seven points.

Junior John Schvien is the Jackets' third-leading scorer with a goal and a team-high four assists. He tallied both assists in CU's win over AB on Saturday.

Jon Brown and Sebastian Duque have two goals each.

Yellow Jacket senior keeper Paulo Pinto ranks second in CU's career goals against average list (0.89). Pinto has allowed 13 goals in nine games this year while making 36 saves.

SIU is led by Head Coach Florin Martin. He is in the seventh year of a second coaching stint with the Tigers.

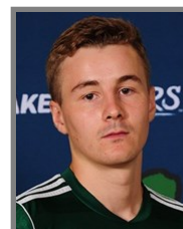

Bryce Childers

Eighteen of the 26 players on the Salem International roster are international student-athletes.

Senior defender Jan Deters from Hamburg, Germany leads the Tiger defensive back line. He was a 2015 G-MAC Second Team selection.

Senior forward Mohamed Ali Khalaf and sophomore midfielder Emilio Marti are dangerous offensive weapons for SIU.

Cedarville holds a 4-0-1 lead in the all-time series with the Tigers. The Yellow Jackets posted a 5-1 win last Sept. 12 at Salem and a 3-2 verdict last Oct. 22 in Cedarville.
