YOUTH WANTS TO KNOW Professor Bruce Turnbull

On the first Sunday of this new year there was a television program which, to those who had ears to hear, was no less than a modern Macedonian call. The program has the title "Youth Wants To Know," and on this particular week a select group of some of the keenest of American youth sat in a panel to question Dr. Linus Pauling. Dr. Pauling is certainly one of the greatest scientists alive. His book, "The Nature of the Chemical Bond," is on the shelves of nearly every serious chemist, and his monumental work of untangling the stubborn structure of protein molecules brought him the much-deserved world acclaim associated with the Nobel Prize.

The most significant thing about this program was not the appearance of such an esteemed scientist, but of what "youth wanted to know." The program had already started when, one after another, these bright-eyed young people were asking Dr. Pauling, "Is there any conflict between science and religion?" They pressed in on him with question after question. It was obvious that it was a matter of no small concern to them. But they were turned away empty, for he had no satisfactory answer for them. He attempted to parry every thrust, for Dr. Pauling is a scientist who does not believe in the God of the Bible.

Who is going to give an answer? Are the cancerous growths of doubt and unbelief to be allowed to gnaw away unchecked the souls of our youth?

By some strange combination of events, one of the world's greatest theologians was on the television program "Conversation" that very same afternoon. Dr. Paul Tillich, it appeared, was there to give present-day theology's answer to the question of science and the Bible. According to Dr. Tillich, the answer is very simple. Science is in the horizontal plane, religion is in the vertical plane, and they can have no possible rational point of contact. Therefore, you may believe any and all theories of science you choose, including evolution, destructive higher criticism of the Bible, etc., and still have "faith." This is the position of contemporary religion. It goes under the name of Neo-orthodoxy, the new modernism, Barthianism, etc. The attractiveness of such a view is immediately apparent. Even the smallest child wants to have his cake and eat it, too.

But is this the answer? Can a thinking person build anything on an irrational faith? Can such an evanescent will-o'-the-wisp abide the light of day? The apostles evidently did not think so. They were much concerned with the rational evidence on which their faith was built. (cf. Acts 1:3).

With our youth being handed this sort of stone for bread, does not the need for a college such as Cedarville loom overbearingly large? Here we are committed to the belief that not only do science and the inspired Bible not conflict, but they cannot conflict. We are seeking to make known to the troubled youth of our day the splendid harmony between science and the Bible. Our graduates will be going forth throughout the land with the answer that rings true.

Youth wants to know. Do they deserve to know? "Come over and help us," is their cry.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Dear Friends of Cedarville College:

In Zechariah 4:6 we read "Not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord of hosts." We rejoice that this was not only true when God spoke to Zechariah, but it is a reality today also. Spiritual victories have never been won by carnal means. Sometimes we are prone to gauge success by using size, power and influence as the measuring stick. God shows His views of this type of recognition by asking "For who hath despised the day of small things?" (Zech. 4:10). It is an encouraging exercise to study your Bible and look for the many instances where God has used the "foolish things of the world to confound the wise." (1 Cor. 1:27).

We well know that Cedarville College is one of the small schools in our land but we have reason to believe that God will use it for His Glory. He started it, has sustained it and is blessing it. As we look back over another month we give thanks to God for the way He has been pleased to supply the spiritual and financial needs.

In recent days a great deal has been said about the gifts to colleges by the Ford Foundation. We are glad for the real Christian colleges which have benefited in this manner but a great number of the colleges did not benefit because they do not belong to a regional accrediting agency. This seems to prove the old adage—"It takes money to make money." (Read the article, "Vicious Circle," page 82, Time Magazine, March 5, 1956).

On the front page of this bulletin you have a brief story of our debt retirement program. From September 1 to the present time our friends have given $4,144.67 to debt retirement. You will note that we can obtain a $9,000 gift if we are successful in raising $11,000. Anything you may do to help will be greatly appreciated.

Young people! Don't forget Prospective Student's Day—April 27. We have recently purchased an electronic organ. On the evening of the 27th we are planning a special organ recital. More about this special day in our next bulletin.

Sincerely in Christ,

JAMES T. JEREMIAH

BOOKS

The administration is looking anxiously toward the time when Cedarville College will receive full academic recognition from the State of Ohio. We believe that only then can we train Christian young people in a manner which will properly prepare them for a fruitful ministry in the pastorate, the mission field, the teaching profession, and other fields of Christian activity.

Miss Martha Hall, our Librarian

However, before we can meet the academic standards of the state there is much work that must be accomplished in the library, particularly the acquisition of reference works which are absolutely necessary for research. Therefore we are making this appeal to you—send to us those discarded or non-used books in your possession which appear on the following list. Or perhaps you would rather send to the library fund in care of the College the money necessary to purchase one of these works. In either case, the donor's name will be placed upon the fly leaf of each book received unless otherwise stated.

Prayerfully consider this request and may God jointly bless you and Cedarville College in the God-given task of training young people for the Lord's work.
