October 31, 2011

Last week was nothing short of memorable. From Senior Night to snowy days, our team weathered the last home game of the regular season, some freezing practices, and eleven hours on a windy highway to complete one of my favorite soccer weeks so far.

Tuesday night's game versus Urbana was deemed Senior Night. For the six of us veterans who have experienced four years of wins, losses, Coach Mac jokes, short buses, and Red Hot cheers, the game held a little more meaning than usual. Before the match, we seniors walked into a locker room decked out with streamers, balloons, gifts, and candy from the underclassmen to celebrate our last season together. As the team settled down at 5:45 pm in preparation for Coach Mac's locker room talk, I tried to heed to Megan Spring's advice from last year and savor the moment. All of the girls who were sitting in that locker room had impacted my life at some point in some way. I realized how blessed I was to be surrounded by each and every one of them, and I only hoped they knew how much they meant to me.

I eventually snapped out of my emotional daydreaming to focus on Coach Mac's remarks about Urbana. Once he finished telling us a bit about their system and motivating us to play our game, he paused. Then he got out his smartphone. After explaining that we needed to "get our motors running tonight," he opened up a racing car app and turned up the volume so that we could hear an engine revving up. I sure will miss Coach "Vroom Vroom" Mac.

That night, we did play our game. Rachel was on fire with two goals, while Kari and the defenders denied Urbana hardly any scoring opportunities. Winning 2-0 was a great way to end the night. To celebrate, Coach Bri "Can't find my keys" Barnes even ordered a couple specialty pizzas from Colonial (I still believe she is trying to make up for the Quizno's incident.)

Friday afternoon, we climbed onto our charter bus that we would inhabit for practically two days en route to Davis & Elkins College in the beautiful state of West Virginia, aka Almost Heaven, aka Mountain Mama, aka Where Dresden and Kelso Call Home. A couple hours in, Coach used his smartphone technologies once again, but this time it was to bring some bad news:

Eight to twelve inches of snow expected in Randolph County, West Virginia. Winter Storm Advisory. Possible Power Lines Down. High Winds.

Awesome. While most of us didn't pack much more than an extra long-sleeve t-shirt for warmth, we were pretty dumbfounded to find that we might be playing in snow before Halloween.

Thankfully, we preoccupied ourselves with various activities on the trip. We were entertained for literally hours by making silly videos on the bus, including one where Morgan's friend "Fresden" made a special appearance. At some point the bus even turned into a mobile beauty salon, complete with manicure stations, back massages, and even eyebrow tweezing. We get creative when we're bored.

Some great memories were also had at Ponderosa involving Kristie "Where's the straw?" Wolff and Bri "It's so funny I'm crying" Barnes. Don't worry if you think you've missed out; it was all caught on film.

So you are probably wondering when I will ever talk about the game on Saturday. It just so happens that Coach's weather forecast was semi-correct. We woke up Saturday morning to a couple inches of snow outside our Super 8 Motel window, and within a couple hours we were informed that the game against Davis & Elkins was cancelled. There were some mixed emotions as we piled back onto the bus, but after Coach's explanation of the shape D&E's field was in, I was relieved to avoid a messy game that may not have accurately portrayed our soccer skills.

Tuesday we play Urbana at 7 pm for the first round of a six-team tournament we're participating in. This will be our final home game of the season, so brave the cold weather and support us for one more match! We always make it interesting.

See you on the field!
