November 21, 2016

This past week for Cedarville men's basketball was a little up and down. We had a big game against Walsh University who is historically a huge rival for us. Walsh is also joining our league next year, so we wanted to make a statement for next year. When the game started it was one of the weirder games I have seen. The crowd for the game wasn't that big, so the gym was very quiet. The game was also on a Thursday night, which means everybody had class all day, and it's getting to be close to the end of the semester so classes are beginning to get much more stressful. Those two factors alone probably had something to do with why both teams came out and played a little sloppy.

It's hard to create your own energy until you can get into the flow of the game, and we struggled with that at the beginning of the game. After a little time passed we started playing much better and had a lead going into halftime. We knew we were better than Walsh and had a lot of confidence going into the second half. When we came out it was a back and forth game, and Walsh went on a run towards the end of the game. They ended up winning the game, and it was a bit upsetting to the team. We knew we were the better team and should've won, but we couldn't think about the game too much because we had another game Saturday. The only thing we could do was use the game as motivation, and come out with a lot of energy on Saturday.

We played Northwood University on Saturday in Michigan. We really thought this was a game we should win going into, and was a game we wanted to win considering we lost to this team last year. We came out and took control of the game from the start. Everybody on the team had a great game, and played to the best of their ability. This game to me wasn't about who we were playing, but more about us and how we would respond from losing on Thursday. As usual we responded well, and played a good game.

This week we have a game Tuesday night at home against Ferris State (Start time 7:45 p.m.). Anybody that isn't going home for Thanksgiving and can come support we would greatly appreciate it. We also have a game away on Saturday at the University of Findlay (Start time is 7:30 p.m.). We appreciate your continued support and prayers.
