THE HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES

FROM THE EARLIEST PERIOD TO THE PRESENT

BY JOHN B. HENNING

VOLUME 1

THE EARLY PERIOD

The first part of the history of the United States is the story of the early period, from the time of the first European discovery of the continent to the beginning of the American Revolution. This period is characterized by the exploration and settlement of the eastern seaboard, the discovery of the interior, and the establishment of the first permanent colonies.

The first European to discover the continent was Christopher Columbus in 1492. He sailed from Spain in search of a westward route to the Indies, and instead discovered the New World. His discovery opened the way for European exploration and settlement.

The first permanent European colony was established in 1607 at Jamestown, Virginia. It was founded by a group of English settlers who were sent to the continent by the Virginia Company. The colony survived through a series of hardships, including a severe winter and a lack of food, and eventually became a permanent settlement.

Other early colonies were established in the 17th century, including Plymouth in 1620 and the Massachusetts Bay Colony in 1630. These colonies were founded by Puritan settlers who sought religious freedom and a better life in the New World.

The early period of American history is a time of great discovery and exploration. It is a time when the continent was first settled and the foundations of the United States were laid.
