New Director for Cedarville's Center for Teaching and Learning

CEDARVILLE, OHIO – Robert McDole has been named the director of the Center for Teaching and Learning at Cedarville University.

In this role, McDole will oversee faculty training, online development and the support of faculty advancement in the areas of teaching and learning. McDole has more than 10 years of experience in designing and implementing online educational projects and enhancing online graduate programs.

Since graduating from Cedarville University in 1998, McDole has led several innovative distance and online educational initiatives. Most recently, he developed online programs at Multnomah University in Portland, Oregon.

"I'm looking forward to building relationships with people here on campus and seeing how I can support them," McDole said. "My goal is to equip faculty and students with the tools they need for success."

Located in southwest Ohio, Cedarville University is an accredited, Christ-centered, Baptist institution with an enrollment of 3,760 undergraduate, graduate, and online students in more than 100 areas of study. Founded in 1887, Cedarville is recognized nationally for its authentic Christian community, rigorous academic programs, strong graduation and retention rates, accredited professional and health science offerings, and leading student satisfaction ratings.
