CU Teams Travel to the Philippines, Austria and Costa Rica

Members of the Cedarville University women's soccer team have returned from a 10-day missions trip to the country of Austria. The team was led by head coach John McGillivray along with assistant coach Krista (Watson) Mattern and her husband, Jason. The main focus of the trip was helping run a soccer camp that was being held at the training facility of Austria's #2 club/professional team. Throughout the week, the team was able to share the Gospel with the Austrian trainers/coaches from the camp. Additionally, players were involved in other ministries including street evangelism. The team was also a big encouragement to two local churches.

Earlier this summer, Yellow Jacket basketball players Austin Foote and Daniel Kohavi, joined with seven other CU students for a basketball missions trip to the Philippines. This group was under the direction of MIS founder Dr. Don Callan and former student assistant coach and Cedarville alum Loren Kuhn. There were many awesome times of sharing the Gospel with those who came to watch the team play.

A busy summer concludes in August with the Lady Jacket volleyball team departing for a week-long missions trip to Costa Rica under the leadership of head coach Doug Walters. The trip will focus on ministry opportunities in orphanages, sugar cane villages and street witnessing as well as competition against club and national teams. At the conclusion of the evening scrimmages, team members will be sharing their personal testimonies and the plan of salvation.

Cedarville University and specifically, the CU Athletic Department is committed to integrating faith and learning as part of the overall student experience. Coaches and student-athletes are challenged to develop a deeper relationship with Jesus Christ and share that relationship through opportunities like the trips this summer to the Philippines, Austria and Costa Rica.

CU athletics provides a wonderful platform from which Jesus Christ can be shared with the world. Please continue to uplift Yellow Jacket athletics in prayer that God would be glorified in all that is accomplished.

Thots from the SID Desk

by Mark Womack
CU Sports Information Director

STING subscribers can expect to see a few changes beginning with the next issue. Some will be inconspicuous while others may not be so subtle.

The top priority of the publication, however, will be unaltered. It will continue to be a quarterly that accentuates the Christ-centered approach of Cedarville University athletics. That was the goal of former Athletic Director Dr. Don Callan when he initiated the piece more than 30 years ago.

The STING has faced "change" before and adjusted. As I glance on my desk at the first issue of the publication from the fall of 1979, I am reminded that the technology that is so prevalent today was non-existent then. We had no internet, multi-faceted sports web sites, cell phones, iPhones, text messaging, Facebook, Twitter, digital cameras, cable television, and on it goes.

Print media was a staple. Most everything that used to appear in the STING - namely season pre-views, recaps, and results - is now available at the click of a button from one's computer.

Now, here are a few items to look for in upcoming issues. First and foremost, we'll convert the publication to full-color while retaining the glossy, eight-page look. We will also return to a self-mailer format so it doesn't come to our readers in an envelope.

Cedarville University is in transition to the NCAA and that is a major "change" in and of itself. Expect articles from current Athletic Director Dr. Alan Geist as well as Compliance Coordinator Drew Howard on the implications the move has on the University, the athletic department, and even you as fans.

It's a privilege for me to write an article in this space where "Callan's Comments" appeared for three-plus decades. Coach Callan used his expertise to deliver countless essays on how Christians can play an important role at all levels of the sports world.

Dr. Callan is not stepping completely away from the keyboard and will remain as a contributing writer on occasion. When possible, we will take advantage of his 50 years with the Yellow Jackets and utilize the valuable connection he possesses to many of our friends and alumni.

This publication is the athletic department's answer to the University's Torch magazine as well as the Inspire, which is produced by the Alumni Office. The STING continues to promote the accolades along with human interest headlines that make Yellow Jacket athletics extraordinary in the world in which we live.

Thanks for reading and "Back the Jackets!"

Media Guides Earn NAIA Publication Awards

The CU Sports Information Office was recently recognized for the quality of its publications at the 2010 National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics Sports Information Directors Association (NAIA-SIDA) workshop held on the campus of Menlo College in Atherton, California.

Cedarville's SID office secured eight Top Ten awards in nine publication categories entered for the 2009-10 season. The media guides in the NAIA-SIDA contest are judged by sports information directors, media members and design experts from across the country.

The Yellow Jacket women's basketball media guide earned a third-place finish in its category while the women's tennis guide also captured a third-place spot in the individual brochure competition.

The golf media guide finished fourth and the men's tennis guide placed fifth in the individual sport brochure category.

Other top ten finishes included women's soccer and men's & women's track and field both earning a seventh-place slot. Men's soccer and baseball each placed in the tenth position.

Over the last 11 years in NAIA-SIDA Publication Contests, CU media guides and game programs have finished in the Top Five on 55 occasions.

Twice during that time span, the Yellow Jacket Sports Information website was voted tops in the country.

Cedarville University was also honored in a separate publication contest conducted by the College Sports Information Directors of America (CoSIDA). The 2009 Yellow Jacket men's and women's cross country media guide took third place honors in the cross country category. The CoSIDA Publication Contest is divided into three divisions. CU competes in Division C which includes all NAIA, NCAA III and junior college institutions.

Former CU Athlete Writes Book about Dealing with Grief over Daughter's Death

by Morgan Jarema, Grand Rapids Press

Why? It's the question in the mind of every parent who has lost a child.

In his grief over the death of his teenage daughter, Dave Branon hit on an answer he admits he's not happy about. But it's one that brings him comfort.

"All I can say is, it happened so God can be glorified," he said. "It doesn't make any sense to me, but that's the answer. I think God wants Melissa's life to glorify him still."

Branon, author and popular "Our Daily Bread" contributor, has written a book titled "Beyond the Valley," detailing how he searched his faith after his 17-year-old daughter, Melissa, died in a car crash in Ottawa County's Port Sheldon Township on June 6, 2002.

The Grand Rapids Baptist High School student was on her way home from the beach with friends. The car she was riding in had stopped for a stop sign at the intersection of Van Buren Street and Butternut Drive, but her driver didn't see another car approaching from his right and pulled into its path, police said.

What Branon wants readers to take from the book: that "God gives us a reason to live on, even though every day is a struggle."

Branon is an editor for Discovery House Publishers and RBC Ministries in Grand Rapids, and has written more than 2,000 devotional articles and 14 books.

"Because I had already written so much about Melissa in 'Our Daily Bread,' I knew people were interested in, how does a person live with this kind of tragedy?" he said.

"We've got boxes of letters and cards from people, saying they appreciate that openness and honesty."

Facing the questions

Branon also is honest about how his family — his wife, Sue, and children, Steve, Julie and Lisa — struggled with their faith.

"In the book, I talk about how you trust God your whole life, then something like this happens. Can you still trust him? That's a key question grieving parents have to answer."

Another question: Was God really in control when this happened?

"Those were important questions for Sue and I to figure out, so I figured they were probably important to everybody else who has gone through this," Branon said.

He and his wife found themselves wrestling with that concept when others would mention that God was watching over them as reasons they or someone they cared about survived an accident or illness.

The problem with that reasoning, he said, is "the converse is not applicable," he said. "You can't say that because Melissa was killed in an accident, God is not good. You have to say that we all have a book that has been written, (but) hers just happened to be shorter than we wanted it to be."

"That's a huge comfort to me, because I just can't imagine living with the idea that it was purely an accident. Our lives are more valuable than that."

Overcoming hopelessness

As someone whose writing has focused on bringing readers closer to God, Branon struggled to navigate what he described in "Beyond The Valley" as "a deep ravine of near hopelessness."

The path back to a sense of hope: God's sovereignty.

"One of the very first ideas I had after Melissa died, I said to Sue, 'Look, this is hard to say, but the history of the Christian faith does not rise or fall on Melissa's life. It's been true through thousands of years, and it can't just suddenly become untrue because Melissa died.'"

"If the whole thing comes crashing down because my daughter died? That makes me the center of the universe. This is something that happened in our lives, and it's hard, but it's still part of God's plan. That helped me a lot."

How to go on is another question Branon tackles in the book, which he says boils down to a single choice: "The key question," he writes, "is not about God and what He did, but about us and what we do now."

"That's what's hard, because my thinking is you either trust what God says about things like this, or you have to reject it," Branon said. "To me, (rejecting God) is the ultimate journey into darkness. If you don't have faith in a situation like this, what else do you have but sadness and pain?"

Branon agrees that parents who lose a child feel isolated in their grief, like "pioneers" of its particular pain. But that pain "make(s) us fellow travelers with some of the greats of the faith," he writes in the book.

"In 600 years, you don't get over it, and here's why: that person is always gone," he said. "It's what I say to other parents I talk to: 'We're traveling through the valley together. You're part of a select group of people who have a responsibility to keep your son or daughter's memory alive and be helpful to other people.'"

Athletic Center Gets Facelift

The Callan Athletic Center has an updated sparkling appearance! Highlighting a summer overhaul are new bleachers featuring VIP seats as well as new scoreboards.

Service Supply Ltd., Inc. of Columbus, Ohio took control of the job which also entailed refinishing the wood floor and repainting all of the walls. The work began in mid-to-late March and was finished by early June just in time for the start of the busy summer camp schedule.

The original wooden bleachers that had been in the building since it opened in 1981 were removed. They were replaced by state-of-the-art bleachers with navy blue plastic contour seats.

The south bleachers on the press box side of the facility include 96 VIP stadium-style seats. Fans will ultimately have the ability to purchase season ticket packages for the special section located at mid-court behind the score table.

Both sets of bleachers have five aisles instead of three with hand rails in each running from floor level to the top row. The new seating improves the aesthetics of the facility and provides added comfort for fans of the Yellow Jackets' popular home events.

The main center scoreboard as well as the boards on the east and west ends were replaced. All of the LCD boards have space to spell team names over the scoring columns. The end boards can post jersey numbers, personal fouls, and points scored of players during basketball games.

Another interesting feature that most fans won't see is additional score board clocks have been mounted in the officials' locker room area, the visitors' locker room, and the CU men's and women's basketball locker rooms. This will allow people in those areas to easily monitor how much time remains during pre-game and halftime.

Yellow Jacket Fall Schedule Previews

Cross country calendar features All-Ohio at Cedarville

The Yellow Jackets will host three meets again this fall at the Elvin R. King Cross Country Course including the All-Ohio Intercollegiate Championships for the first time ever.

The All-Ohio will come to campus during Homecoming Weekend on Friday, October 1 with all of the state's four-year institutions invited to participate. Last year, 42 women's teams and 38 men's teams took part.

The 20th Annual Friendship Invitational will be run on Sept. 18. The day not only features the men's and women's college races, but junior high and high school competition as well.

The National Christian College Athletic Association (NCCAA) Championships return on Nov. 13. It will be the 16th consecutive year and the 31st year out of the past 33 that CU will serve as host.

The Lady Jackets open their season on Sept. 4 at the Dayton Invitational. The season opener for the Cedarville men occurs on Sept. 11 at the Miami Invitational.

Rachel Wong

Evan Thayer

Demanding slate awaits Yellow Jacket soccer

An ambitious 18-game schedule is on tap for the Yellow Jackets this fall featuring nine home dates including the Dave Jones Memorial Classic.

First-year head coach Todd Beall inherited a docket loaded with five schools who received votes in last season's final NAIA poll and two others who at one time earned votes during the year. Three of those ended up in the Top 25 and, fortunately, CU will face all three on the home turf.

The season opener occurs on Aug. 31 when Cincinnati Christian pays a visit for the first of seven night games at 7:00 p.m.

Point Park provides the Homecoming opposition at 3:00 p.m. on Oct. 2. The schedule totals nine home games, eight away games, and one neutral site contest. The American Midwest Conference portion of the schedule features four matches at home and four on the road.

Jason Bender

Lady Jackets gear up for 2010 soccer season

A total of 18 matches make up the 2010 Cedarville University women's soccer schedule including 10 American Midwest Conference encounters. Head coach John McGillivray will begin his 13th campaign at the helm on Aug. 27 when the Lady Jackets travel to Indianapolis to face Marian in the season opener at 7:00 p.m.

The Cedarville Classic takes place on Sept. 3-4. The Lady Jackets square off with Rio Grande in the home opener at 7:00 p.m. CU will host Spring Arbor on Saturday at 4:30 p.m.

Kelsey Watkins

The Lady Jackets will host AMC foes Malone, Carlow, Point Park (Homecoming), Notre Dame (Ohio), and Daemen. CU embarks on league road trips to Ursuline, Roberts Wesleyan, Houghton, Mount Vernon Nazarene, and Walsh.

CU volleyball schedule features 34 matches

Lady Jacket head volleyball coach Doug Walters has assembled an intriguing 2010 schedule featuring a mix of NAIA and NCAA opponents.

A total of 34 assignments are lined up not counting potential post-season play. There are 14 matches slated for the Callan Athletic Center including the first seven.

Cincinnati Christian visits for the season opener on Sept. 2 with NCAA Division II opponent Ohio Dominican following on Sept. 7.

The five-team Cedarville Invitational on Sept. 10-11 is entirely a D-II field. Ohio Valley (W. Va.), Palm Beach Atlantic (Fla.), Saint Joseph's (Ind.), and Urbana will participate in the round-robin format.

The American Midwest Conference opener will be on Oct. 1 against Ursuline during Homecoming weekend.

Cedarville, recently accepted into Candidacy Year 2 in the NCAA, has been invited to play in the prestigious Division II GLIAC/GLVC Crossover Tournament. The event takes place Oct. 15-16 at the Great Lakes Center in Aurora, IL. The field is made up primarily of schools from the Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Conference and the Great Lakes Valley Conference.

Lauren Gill

Tennis squads embark on fall schedules

For the second consecutive year, both CU men's and women's teams will add a fall schedule of matches to their 2010-11 season. Head coach Dr. Dee Morris begins her fifth season in the role after serving 30 years as an assistant. Yellow Jacket head coach Alan Edlund has been at the helm of the program since 1995 and has produced 11 winning seasons during that time.

Brooke Johnson

Golfers tee up for fall tournaments

CU will play in several fall contests for the 2010-11 golf season. The highlight of the autumn golf campaign will be the National Christian Athletic Association (NCCAA) national championship. The majority of Yellow Jacket action comes during the spring season and head coach Ryan Bowen, beginning his tenth year at CU, will look to produce another successful campaign on the links.

Cedarville Takes Next Step in NCAA Membership

Yellow Jackets Approved for Candidacy Year 2

Yellow Jacket fans are a year closer to seeing their teams compete at the NCAA Division II level. On Friday, July 9, the National Collegiate Athletic Association notified Cedarville University that it has been approved for Candidacy Year 2 in the membership process.

The highly-anticipated phone call from the NCAA was received by University President Dr. Bill Brown, Provost Dr. John Gredy, and Athletic Director Dr. Alan Geist. It's another major hurdle cleared by the institution in what is an arduous three-year procedure.

"We're thrilled to move on to the second year of the process," said Geist. "We felt like we did everything that the NCAA asked us to do. This past year has been a busy one and everyone in the department played an important role in one way or another."

Since being approved for the Division II membership process nearly a year ago to the day, Cedarville was charged with implementing several new items during Candidacy Year 1 while putting others in print.

Some of the key components included:

- Adding personnel - the most important of which was hiring the school's first-ever NCAA compliance coordinator.
- Dropping the faculty (teaching) loads of coaches.
- Producing a detailed budget plan.
- Assembling a Compliance Handbook as well as updating the Coaches' Handbook and Student-Athlete Handbook.
- Completing a two-day assessment and examination by an NCAA vendor.
- Making a required visit to an NCAA Division II institution (University of Indianapolis).

The NCAA monitored the school's progress over the past 12 months before issuing a positive recommendation.

Now, Candidacy Year 2 presents further goals to meet in order to be ready to operate as a Division II member. The school's provisional year will be 2011-12.

Geist summarized the present with the future in saying, "It is satisfying to reach this point even though we realize we still have much to work on. We have an idea of what it takes to be an NCAA Division II member. Now, we have to do it."

Provided it continues to meet NCAA obligations, Cedarville would become a full Division II member in time for the 2012-13 academic year. The Yellow Jackets plan to continue their long-time affiliation with the National Christian College Athletic Association while also seeking NCAA conference affiliation.

Cedarville will wrap up a 60-plus year association with the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics following the 2010-11 athletic season. It will also be the school's final year in the American Midwest Conference, despite being the lone remaining charter member of the league, which was founded in 1949 as the Mid-Ohio League.

Only six schools in the state of Ohio are active Division II members: Ashland, Central State, Findlay, Lake Erie, Tiffin, and Urbana. Other schools from the state in the NCAA membership process include Malone, Notre Dame College, Ohio Dominican, Ursuline and Walsh.
