

2004

When Walking

Mary Beth Baustian
Cedarville University

DigitalCommons@Cedarville provides a publication platform for fully open access journals, which means that all articles are available on the Internet to all users immediately upon publication. However, the opinions and sentiments expressed by the authors of articles published in our journals do not necessarily indicate the endorsement or reflect the views of DigitalCommons@Cedarville, the Centennial Library, or Cedarville University and its employees. The authors are solely responsible for the content of their work. Please address questions to dc@cedarville.edu.

---

Recommended Citation

Baustian, Mary Beth (2004) "When Walking," Cedarville Review: Vol. 7 , Article 11.
Available at: <https://digitalcommons.cedarville.edu/cedarvillereview/vol7/iss1/11>

---

When Walking

Browse the contents of this issue of Cedarville Review.

Keywords

Walking, poetry, Oxford

Creative Commons License

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-Noncommercial-No Derivative Works 4.0 License.

Follow this and additional works at: <https://digitalcommons.cedarville.edu/cedarvillereview>

Part of the Art and Design Commons, Fiction Commons, Nonfiction Commons, and the Photography Commons

Mary Beth Baustian

When Walking

The wide umbrellas and opposite cars, narrow sidewalks and cold shoulders
made walking in Oxford a strategic exercise.

I walked fast and fastidiously
in my red wool coat;
I visualized the muscles of my legs
as they tensed and stretched to cover one extra square of sidewalk.
At the corner of Little Clarendon and Walton
my breath was heavier, and at St. Giles and Broad my calves began to burn.

By the end I knew:
Edge tour groups
and step quickly right of bus queues.
The very middle of pedestrian Cornmarket is a sanctuary,
away from ins and outs of the shops.
Beware of bikes, they blend into the crowd.
No one moves aside for you. Don't expect them to.
Be resolute in your path
and you'll clip along nicely.

On That Sidewalk

I know the British aren't quickly friendly.
They stride along the ancient, uneven pavement under their portable, domed cathedrals and are private by curtains of rain, until, suddenly,
they lift their umbrella, or tilt it to the side to let you pass.