Our Three Divisions

The NCAA's three divisions were created in 1973 to align like-minded campuses in the areas of philosophy, competition and opportunity.

What are the eligibility requirements in each division?
 College-bound students who want to compete at a Division I or Division II school must meet standards set by NCAA members. For Division III, athletes must meet the admissions standards set by the school. Eligibility standards can be found at eligibilitycenter.org.

How is each division governed?
 NCAA schools develop and approve legislation for their own division. Groups of presidents and chancellors lead each division in the form of committees with regularly scheduled meetings.

Learn more at ncaa.org/about.

Did you know?

Division I student-athletes graduate at a higher rate than the general student body.

Division II is the only division with schools in Alaska, Puerto Rico and Canada.

Division III's largest school has 24,702 undergraduates. The smallest? 284.

What it means to wear a uniform.

Wearing a uniform isn't all about the colors and the shoes. It's about teamwork, leadership, dedication, and sheer drive. All stitched together to create something bigger than yourself. Every day, we wear ours with pride. Thank you for doing the same.

Lowe's is an official corporate partner of the NCAA® and has been since 2005.

How We Support College Athletes

NCAA 101

Opportunities and Experiences

▶ Each year, the NCAA funds 90 championships in 24 sports, including paying for almost 14 million miles of travel to get athletes to the competitions.

▶ More than 90% of former student-athletes surveyed 10 years after finishing their eligibility reported they were satisfied with their overall college experience.

Financial Assistance

▶ NCAA schools award more than $3.3 billion in athletics scholarships every year to more than 175,000 student-athletes.

▶ The NCAA finances a Student Assistance Fund of more than $82 million each year to help Division I athletes with essential needs, from flying home for a family emergency to buying a winter coat.

Wellness and Insurance

▶ The NCAA's Sport Science Institute promotes health and safety through research and training on concussions, overuse injuries, drug testing, mental health, sexual assault prevention and more.

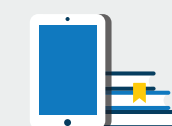

▶ The NCAA funds an insurance policy covering all college athletes who experience catastrophic injuries while playing or practicing their sport — providing up to $20 million in lifetime insurance benefits.

▶ To support the nutritional needs of student-athletes, Divisions I and II schools can provide unlimited meals. Some schools have nutritionists and other health professionals to work with players.

Academic Services

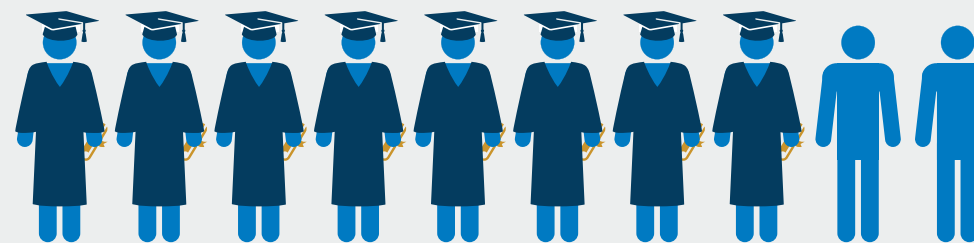

▶ NCAA schools help student-athletes succeed in the classroom by providing state-of-the-art technology, tutoring and access to academic advisors.

▶ Since 2004, more than 16,000 former college athletes in Division I have returned to campus to complete their degrees. The NCAA offers a degree-completion program, and schools can fund additional scholarships to help former athletes graduate.

▶ More than 8 in 10 student-athletes at Division I schools earn bachelor's degrees. That is their highest rate ever and higher than the rate for the general student body.

Personal and Professional Development

▶ The NCAA offers education and training programs, such as the Student-Athlete Leadership Forum and Career in Sports Forum, which are designed to enhance the well-being and personal development of college athletes.

▶ The NCAA After The Game Career Center connects former student-athletes with career-seeking advice and job postings for various industries and levels of experience.

Take away the fans.

Take away the competition.

Take away the echo of squeaking shoes.

The jerseys. The ball. The scoreboard.

Take away the court,

and they're still left with a future.

Because what they learn as student-athletes prepares them for more than the game.

PREPARING STUDENT-ATHLETES FOR LIFE.

CHAMPIONS IN COMPETITION. CHAMPIONS IN LIFE.

What made them great student-athletes makes them great employees

Every day, millions of former student-athletes from 1,100 NCAA schools prove the value of college sports, using what they learned in the classroom and on the field.

Former college athletes excel as leaders in all walks of life, across diverse professions throughout the global workforce. Celebrating this remarkable community, NCAA After the Game highlights the success these former student-athletes are having in post-collegiate careers and showcases how their experiences in college played a significant role in those achievements.

Also, to help them win in the biggest game of all — life — NCAA After the Game provides professional networking opportunities with former student-athletes across the nation, a career center helping to find their next role and an information hub offering tips to successfully transition to the next stage in their journey.

FROM THE DESK OF NCAA PRESIDENT MARK EMMERT

College athletics is more than a game, tournament or season. It's an experience from which these young men and women will grow and benefit for the rest of their lives.

Welcome to the 2019 winter championships. Whatever the sport, an NCAA championship is viewed as the final test for a college athlete who has reached this level through years of intense preparation and persistence. But the stakes are higher than a single victory. While we are proud of achievements on fields and courts, we also celebrate the educational opportunity that college sports provides for nearly half a million student-athletes.

College athletics is more than a game, tournament or season. It's an experience from which these young men and women will grow and benefit for the rest of their lives. As an Association, we have worked hard to improve opportunities for all student-athletes, and we are not done. We're working to ensure we create as many opportunities as possible for college athletes. For the majority, that means a college degree and professional career in something other than sports. It also means that in everything we do, we remain focused on prioritizing academics, protecting the well-being of students and promoting fairness.

This championship season, we celebrate what is best about college sports and recognize students for their achievements in and outside of competition. Most importantly, we applaud these students not only for the win today, but also for what follows in their lives. Enjoy the championship.
