BLAINE'S MEMORY.

A Mary Skinning How Well Developed Was its Femer.

A talent for romembering names and faces is a most convenient one, especially for a man in public life. Few men have it in greater measure than had Mr. Blaine. There are a thousand stories of his wonderful readiness in recalling persons, and here is one not before in print: In the early sixties he was traveling in a sleeping car through Canada. Deep in the Canadian forest was a delay of several hours. A little girl of five years was a fellow passenger. Mr. Blaine made friends with the child and to pass the time An Indianapolis statistician points of waiting proposed that they should out that the American haby has thirty go in search of spruce gum. Fifteen years went by, and the child had grown to be a college senior without again seeing Mr. Blaine. One afternoon she heard him speak at a large public meeting, and at the close of the address she made her way to him. She said simply: /

"Mr. Blaine, I don't suppose you will remember me. I am Margaret Sargent."

Quick as a flash came the answer, emphasized with a hearty hand "Have you ever tasted any spruce gum since that was as good as that

Of course the recognition made that girl his friend for life. Mr. Blaine was once asked how he acquired the power. He said that he was not conscious of any especial effort to gain it unless by cultivating the habit of always thinking over carefully each night the events of the day and the persons who had taken part in them. Probably a brief written record of these would help still further in the strengthening of the power. Certain it is that the confirmed egotist who thinks and talks of nothing outside himself is seldom the owner of the useful memory for the names and faces of

A Collection of Crowns.

A whole collection of crowns is kept in the Russian royal palace. These relies of departed greatnessthey nearly all come from countries which have been subjugated by the Russians—are kept in what is known as the "throneroom." Here are shown the crowns of Poland, Kazan, Georgia, Astrakhan and Persia hesides the thrones and other royal insignia too numerous to mentiou. Besides the crowns of conquered nations, those of almost all the czars may be seen in that vast treasure

The most curious one of the lot is the double crown made for Peter the Great and his half witted brother, the most costly that of the Em-

A Legacy of the Grip

Is often a run-down, system. Weak ness, nervousness, lack of appetite, energy and ambition, with disordered liver and kidneys often follow an at tack of this wretched disease. The greatest need then is Electric Bitters, the splendid tonic, blood purifier and regulator of Stomach, Liver and Kidneys. Thousands have proved that they wonderfully strengthen the nerves, build up the system, and restore to health and good spirits after an attack of Grip. If suffering, try them. Only 50c. Perfect satisfaction guaranteed by Ridgway & Co.

Use of Pigeons For Speculation. In modern times the pigeons have been used for purposes of commerce and speculation as well as war. In 1770 a shrewd Italian had the winning numbers in the lotteries thus sent to him, and it is a well known fact that the London branch of the great Rothschild banking house was able, by means of carrier pigeous, to receive news of the victory at Waterloo three days in advance of the government and to realize an enormous profit by buying up government stock, then very much depressed, and selling again when the rise came.

when a tremendous downpour of rain came on. This threatened to destroy the magnificent blooms. Seeing the danger, the gentleman called all his servants and set to work to carry the pots into the house and arrange them up both sides of the staircase. When they had finished, the lady suddenly ap-peared and fell into a violent rage, declaring that her husband thought more of his flowers than he did of her and that he insulted her by bringing earth into the house. Nothing would appease her. She said he was defiling her house by bringing dirt in, and she would di-vorce him. She sent for her sister to come and be a witness of the divorce and, setting to work with her women, bundled all the flowers out again. When the sister arrived, however, matters were settled up, and the divorce did not take place. On another occasion the same lady sent her small, son down to breakfast in a pink shirt and green tie. The father was shocked at this barbarous combination and made a remark to the English governess, who sent the child back to change his tie. But down came the lady of the house in a furious ruge, saying she knew how to dress the child, that a pink shirt and a green tie were in the best of taste and she would not remain to be insulted by his giving preference to the opinions of an English girl. Again she threatened to divorce him, but again it fell through, as the husband could not find the $3,000 he would have had to pay her until her wrath had Enjoyed in reason, a hobby is the best safeguard imaginable against mental ill health, but when followed up with undue persistence it only too often acts as a short route to the asylum.

Witness, for instance, the case of the brilliant French novelist, Guy de Manpassant. This famous writer to-ward middle life took up merely as a hobby the study of occult science and spiritualistic phenomena. Gradually the absorbing nature of the weird research fascinated him so deeply that he could not speak, think or dream of aught else. Sleep de-serted him, appetite failed him, and finally his actions became so erratic that for the sake of his own safety his friends, were compelled to place the unfortunate author under mi'd restraint. He ended his days shortly afterward within the walls of the sanitarium to which he had been conveyed.

DIVORCE IN TUNKEY.

Divorce, it seems, is very easy in Turkey and does not require a judge and jury to settle matters. All that is necessary is for the injured purpy to say "I divorce you" three times, and the deed is done. The husband has to make the wife a proper allowance, and all is over. A case occurred recently which is rather amusing. A certain Turkish gentleman is a keen amateur gardener, and his garden contains at all sensons a brilliant show of flowers, to which he devotes most of his time, rather to the disgust of his wife,

How Some Coins Were Named. The origin of the names of coins in present use is curious. In many cases they imply a standard of weight that lost its significance long ago. This is the case with the English standard, the pound. The word-shilling is of German derivation,

CONDENSED STORIES. Dr. Milburn's Congressional Prayer and the Reporters.

The Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Record tells of an amusing difference of opinion among the newspaper men and shorthand reporters in the senate. One day not long ago Dr. Milburn, the blind chaplain of the senate, in his opening prayer asked divine favor for the reporters who send out accounts of what is done in congress. There are two classes of these reportersthe newspaper men in the gallery and the shorthand men on the floor who report for The Congressional Record. Each side at once declared that the prayer was meant for the other, and in the controversy that arose an appeal was taken to Chaplein Milburn, who promptly declared that all reporters were meant, as all needed to be prayed for.

The discussion brought to light the fact that the chaplain's prayers are open to revision when occasion demands, just as the speeches of senators and representatives are. In 1373 Dr. Su.derland, the senate chaplain, mentioned a host of persons by name in a prayer and the next day found he had forgotten to say a word for Henry Wilson, the vice president of the United States, so the official reporters, after a consultation with Dr. Sunderland, interpolated a nice little prayer for | the vice president.

A Terribio Mistake.

A celebrated German physician was once called upon to treat an aristocratic lady, the sole cause of whose complaint was high living and lack of exercise. But it would never do to tell her so, so his medical advice ran thus:

"Arise at 5 o'clock, take a walk in the park for one hour, then drink a cup of tea, then walk another hour and take a cup of chocolate. Take breakfast at 8."

Her condition improved visibly until one morning the carriage of the baroness was seen to approach the physician's residence at light-

The patient dashed up to the doctor's office, and on his appearing on the scene she gasped out, "Oh, doc-

Where Pearls Are Found.

Old geographies make the Persian gulf the seat of the pearl industry, but now many beautiful pearls are found in different parts of America. In the Mississippi river and its tributaries in Minnesota and Wisconsin quite a number of people are engaged in fishing for the mussels in which the pearls are found. It is said that one pearl is found in every ten mussels fished from the water. The fisherman does not worry about this. He keeps the shells and takes them to the button factory, where there is always a demand, for, as you know, boys and girls use up a good many buttons in the course of year, and no one ever knows what becomes of them. A floating button factory built on a boat travels up and down the Mississippi. It stops at a place long enough to use up all the shells and then goes on where there is another mussel bed or where the fishermen accumulate a heap. Some of the pearls are very valuable and have been sold for as large's price as $50,000.
