Forum Answers Tough Questions on Presidential Election

CEDARVILLE, OHIO – Helping citizens navigate through the stormy presidential election is the goal of the “Election 2016: History in the Making” forum, to be held Wednesday, Oct. 26, at 7 p.m. in Cedarville University's Dixon Ministry Center. The free event, sponsored by Cedarville's Center for Political Studies, is open to the public.

Expert panelists will address the question, “How did we get here?” in terms of the candidates, campaign rhetoric and the role media has played throughout the campaign.

The panelists are Dr. Christopher Devine, assistant professor of political science at the University of Dayton, Laura Bischoff, political writer for the Dayton Daily News, and Dr. Mark Caleb Smith, director of the Center for Political Studies at Cedarville University. WHIO-TV news anchor James Brown will moderate.

“This has been a political campaign like no other campaign our country has ever seen. People are confused, frustrated, and some don’t know if they should even vote,” said Smith. “We’ll do our best to address these issues at the forum.”

The panelists will cover various topics related to the primary campaigns and the election cycle for the first hour of the program before accepting questions from the audience. The forum will be broadcast live on WHIO Radio (1290 AM and 95.7 FM).
