As children grow up, they start adventures of their own. Well, where are the biggest adventures? Between the pages of a book, of course! Unfortunately, this cat feels left out after his boy starts reading by himself. It's a good thing that he's there to help! This story is warmhearted and will remind you of your own fuzzy furball. The attention to detail in the illustrations will have you smiling as you pick out classic books of your youth depicted on the shelves. This would be a great book for children learning to read. It has a mix of short, simple sentences and small paragraphs that encourages parents and child to work together during story time. Recommended Morgan Rupp, Centennial Library Intern, Cedarville University
