Student Talent Night Tomorrow

By Martha Sprano

The annual New Student Talent Night, which has been the master project of the theatrical underworld for the past few weeks, announces its curtain time for tomorrow evening, Saturday, November 5, at 8:00 in Alford Auditorium.

Freshmen and new students have cemented twelve single acts into a variety performance in the musical and dramatic spectrum. And as behind every robot there must be a Dr. Frankenstein, and behind every theory an Einstein, so, too, Saturday night's happening boasts its own with emcees Drs. Jim and Sharon Biddle.

Scott Browne, Student Body Project

Chairman, commented that the content of the individual performances will give a more serious flavor to this year's talent show, but even with the lack of dramatic levity, Browne is positive and enthusiastic about the event. "It's coming together well," he remarked confidently.

To tie up the evening with an all-time favorite, Terry Broach and Warren Throckmorton will be performing several of their own musical selections. Following Broach and Throckmorton, the audience will be at the mercy of the ingenuity of the Hartman girls as they appear in a special premiere performance.

Admission to the program will be $1.00 per person and $1.50 for couples.

Student Body Project Chairman Scott Browne anticipates an exciting evening.

Pickering Relates History Of Baptist Bible College

by Teresa Galbreath

Dr. Ernest Pickering, president of Baptist Bible College (BBC) of Clarks Summit, Pennsylvania, visited Cedarville College for three days this past week. While here, he spoke in chapel and interviewed students interested in BBC.

In an interview with the Whispering Cedars, Dr. Pickering described the history, academic program and future plans of BBC. He also discussed the relationship between Cedarville College and BBC.

Baptist Bible College began in 1932 as Baptist Bible Seminary in Johnson City, New York. The school was a training center for missionary Roman Catholic priests of the Maryknoll order before the Baptists bought it. Dr. Pickering noted that some of the returning Catholic alumni are quite surprised at the changes in the institution.

In 1968 BBC moved to its present location in Clarks Summit, Pennsylvania.

BBC offers a four-year Bachelor of Arts degree program. Major fields of study include Pastoral Studies, Missions, Christian School Education, Local Church Education and Church Music. Each graduate has a major in Bible as well as his field of interest.

Baptist Bible School of Theology is the graduate school division of BBC. Students may earn a Master of Divinity degree.

Baptist Bible College is the fifth largest Bible college in the United States. Currently 877 students are enrolled in the college and 55 attend the seminary. Future plans allow for 1200 students in the college and 250 in the seminary.

When asked about the relationship between BBC and Cedarville College, Dr. Pickering said there is a "good spirit of cooperation." Both the presidents and the deans of the two colleges consult with one another.

Several Cedarville students have transferred from BBC and vice-versa. Also several faculty members have either graduated from or formerly taught at BBC. In fact, President James T. Jeremiah graduated from Baptist Bible Seminary in 1936.

One special area of cooperation between the two schools is the five-year missionary nursing program. In this program a student may spend the first year at BBC, the second at Cedarville to pick up science courses, and the remaining three years at BBC.

Dr. Pickering became president of BBC in 1970 after serving there as academic dean for one year.

The Fruit of Compromise: The New and Young Evangelicals is Dr. Pickering's latest book, released a few months ago. Dr. Pickering stated that his purpose in writing this book was to warn of the subtle influence of the new and young evangelical movement in the realms of missions, churches, and education.

Dr. Pickering and his wife Yvonne have two children: Lloyd, age 4, and Dawn, who graduated from BBC last year.

Coeds Attend Wheaton Confab

How can you keep your college newspaper from being regarded as a "Mickey Mouse" publication?

Can Christian broadcasters change the direction of television?

Does satire have a place in Christian journalism?

During two and a half days of seminars and panel discussion which attempted to answer these questions, six representatives of Cedarville College attended the first annual Campus and Careers Communications Conference last week at Wheaton College, Wheaton, Illinois.

Those traveling to Wheaton from Cedarville were Mrs. Jody Grosh, journalism instructor, and students Dianne Monts, Nanci Tillman, Claire Phillips, Leslie Leyland, and Suzan Zink.

The conference, October 26 through 29, was sponsored in part by the Christian Literature Communications Foundation and the Wheaton Graduate School. An informal get-acquainted session opened the conference on Wednesday night.

The six Cedarville women listened to and questioned noted Christian figures in various fields of communications, such as Bill Pearce, host of "Night Sounds," Joseph Bayly, author and vice president of David C. Cook Publishing, as well as authors Jim Johnson and Jim Engel of Wheaton's graduate program.

Particularly interesting were the presentations of Wayne Stayskal, editorial cartoonist of the Chicago Tribune, and Denny Rydberg, editor of The Wittenburg Door.

Stayskal, in a thirty-minute talk on Friday night, displayed several of his cartoons. His work is a refreshing example of journalism written from a Christian perspective, manifesting God's truth as it relates to many areas of life.

Denny Rydberg, one of the "Keepers of The Wittenburg Door," presented an enlightening view of the use of humor as a means of creativity in Christian publications. Rydberg believes that the evangelical Christian community's inability to laugh at itself and its "sacred cows" are often hindrances to creativity in its journalism.

Other highlights of the conference were a trombone mini-concert by Bill Pearce and a stirring lecture by Nygell Goodwin, a British communications figure.

Approximately sixty students and advisors attended the sessions at Wheaton. Among the other schools represented were Judson College, Faith Baptist College of Iowa, Detroit Bible College, Grace College of Indiana, the University of Windsor, Canada, and Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.

Senate Settles Down to Business

With all Senate elections completed, the Student Senate has begun meeting on a regular basis. Meetings are held at 5:30 every Wednesday in SC 105.

During the first few meetings, Dr. Phipps spoke to the Senate concerning proper parliamentary procedure. All committee assignments have been made also.

The Senate was responsible for various activities over the Homecoming weekend, too. It was reported that the weekend generally went well and there was a favorable attitude toward the activities.

It has also been reported that the refrigerators referred to in a previous issue of Whispering Cedars will be available next quarter. The contract has been sent in to Collegiate Products, Inc., and the Senate is now awaiting a reply.

Subscriptions Now Available

In an attempt to increase its circulation, the Whispering Cedars has announced a new subscription program for those who would like to receive the paper weekly, but are not on campus.

For $10, the subscriber will receive the Whispering Cedars every week at his or her home. This price would cover every issue of winter and spring quarters.

In the past, the Whispering Cedars has had some subscription sales, but this is the first time that an official attempt has been made to offer subscriptions to all those who desire them, according to Craig Miller, Editor of the paper. "We had hoped to announce this program last summer through the Cedarville College Bulletin, but were unable to do so. We have decided to let our current readers know about the offer, and hope that "word-of-mouth" will suffice to get the news out."

Those desiring to subscribe for themselves, or wishing to subscribe for a friend or relative, should send their name and address to the Whispering Cedars, Cedarville College, Cedarville, Ohio 45314. The address where the paper is to be sent, as well as the address of the person purchasing the subscription should be supplied. Payment may be made immediately, or a bill can be sent.

Some Free Advice

Our Board of Trustees has the awesome responsibility of choosing a new President for Cedarville College. The process seems to be shrouded in mystery. No one has said anything about it, or seems willing to say much more than was said in the Cedarville College Bulletin. We have tried to find out what is going on, but no one seems to know. Since things seem to be at the formative stage right now, I would like to offer my free (albeit unsolicited) advice on certain aspects of the decision.

First, I think that any decision should involve Dr. Jeremiah. His leadership of this college and the tremendous record of his 24 years as President are more than superior qualifications for his being an integral part of the decision-making process.

Secondly, I would urge the Trustees to consider appointing faculty, staff, and administration personnel to their "Search Committee." These men and women could give the Trustees invaluable advice on what to look for in a President. They are also the ones who represent the day-to-day functioning of the College and know what type of man is needed to fill the position.

My last recommendation is that the Trustees consider the possibility of consulting selected students at some stage of the search. Students might have some important contributions to make in the area of the needed relationship between the new President and the student body. I would not necessarily favor giving students voting privileges on this committee, but it would be valuable to at least consult them.

Be Prepared

No, this is not a piece of public relations for the Boy Scouts of America. Rather, it is an earnest plea to those of you who are seriously considering post-graduation employment to become involved in pre-graduation experience pertaining to your respective disciplines.

I recently attended a writers' conference where students were advised that "experience is preparation." In fact, this theme occurred repeatedly throughout the entire conference. That is why I'm concerned about what will appear (or won't appear) on the resumes of many Cedarville students when they begin pounding the sidewalks toward commencement time.

I think, in particular, of my own area which is English. What do the "aspiring writers" of this campus plan to unfold before a prospective employer some day? I know both a yearbook and a newspaper editor who would appreciate your services greatly.

This can be carried across a wide range of major areas. This campus holds opportunities for business managers, historians, treasurers, artists, interns, and officers, to name a few. View your time and effort as an investment.

So, when I think of equating experience with preparation, I tend to wonder how many of us will come up short when it counts.

IN YOUR OPINION

Dear Editor:

I am well aware that drawing out a certain controversy is not healthy. But on the other hand I feel that the recent concern over the sound system has brought into light another area which we as Christians need to be concerned with.

I thought your editorial was good, and it expressed the feelings of many on campus. As usual, not all felt the same way, and they are entitled to their opinion. But the way in which they "came back" is so typical of "Fundamental" Christians. That is, the inability to accept constructive criticism of any sort. "Fundamental" Christians are typically overly defensive against any type of criticism which they receive. This proves true both in areas of Biblical concerns and everyday affairs.

I feel that the gentleman operating the sound system would have been better off admitting that there were difficulties (more than two), and then move on and work on the problem. The men of the sound room are to be commended on these past weeks' improvement.

Still, reaction was typical: overly defensive. Should we not as Christians be willing to accept criticism, consider the source, and the intent, and then be willing to learn from it? I would say "Yes!" Most of all let us not become overly defensive, which immediately eliminates any change for good to come out of it. Rather let your Fundamental Christianity be open enough to accept and even seek out constructive criticism so that, as students, we may gain from it all.

'Silmarillion'— A History Fantasy

by Steve Poling

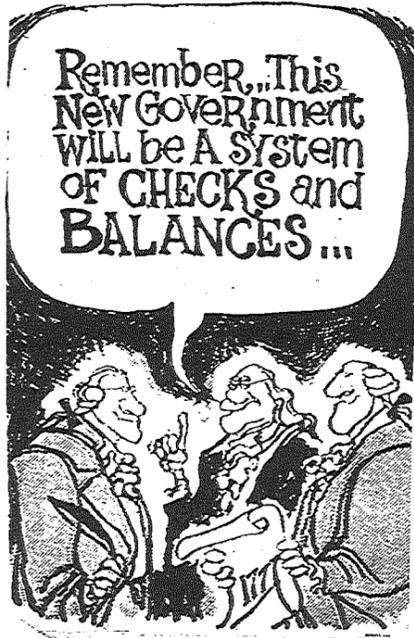

J. R. R. Tolkien was a Christian and a good friend of C. S. Lewis, among other Christian writers. His major work which was a history of the third age of Middle Earth's climax in the Great War of the Ring.

The work under scrutiny this week is The Silmarillion: a history of the first, second and the beginnings of the third age of Middle Earth. The Christianity of J. R. R. Tolkien is evidenced in his works, but that statement of belief is not expressed in an allegorical method of writing. Illustrative fantasy is what his work could be called. Concepts of Christianity are illustrated in the fantasy that Tolkien writes.

To the average Tolkien freak this book is the greatest thing since sliced bread. Many questions raised in the trilogy are answered in The Silmarillion. Questions as to the nature of the origin of Sauron, the origin of the Elves, the creation of Middle Earth by Eru, the One, are answered in this book. The student of Tolkien will have many new facts presented to him that are only hinted at in song or briefly mentioned in the appendix of the Lord of the Rings.

As stated above The Silmarillion is a history of the ages preceding the time of the Great War of the Ring. The book is divided into six sections. The first, Ainulindale, is a record of creation and the C. S. Lewis fan will enjoy comparing this account with that found in Lewis' Chronicles of Narnia.

The second section, Valaquenta, is a

Figuring Out Financial Aid

(part 2 of a series)

How To Find Out If Your Family Has A Financial Need

Pick up a financial aid application, Financial Aid Form (FAF). Complete the FAF and any supporting forms. Mail the FAF to American College Testing Service (ACT) or College Scholarship Service (CSS), whichever is applicable.

How Is Financial Need Computed

After American College Testing Service (ACT) or College Scholarship Service (CSS) receives your Financial Aid Form, the information is fed into computers that have information stored which is necessary to make a fair and reasonable calculation as to how much your particular family can afford for education. Your calculation is determined by comparing the information you submit with national statistics on costs of living for families of different sizes, amounts that should be saved for retirement for different ages, and other similar information. In this way the system provides a uniform analysis, but considers each family's circumstances as different from every other family. The results of the analysis are then reported to the educational institution to which you have indicated that a report be sent. This report is called by American College Testing Service the "Comprehensive Financial Aid Report," or by College Scholarship Service the "Financial Need Analysis Report." At the same time the Comprehensive Financial Aid Report or the Financial Need Analysis Report is being sent to the school, an acknowledgement is sent to you and your parents. The acknowledgement is a confirmation that your application for aid has been processed and a Comprehensive Financial Aid Report or Financial Need Analysis Report has been sent to the school you requested.

It is important to note that in this process, neither ACT or CSS decides who is or is not offered financial aid. This decision rests solely with the postsecondary school. Some schools base their decision on the need of the student alone; others may take academic achievement or other factors into consideration.

Not only is filing an application for financial aid necessary for assessing whether or not you qualify for assistance, it is also required in the guidelines for awarding certain types of aid, specifically, most federal student aid programs.

If you file an application for aid, your financial information will not only be treated in the most confidential manner by ACT or CSS, but also by the institutions and agencies to which you authorize its release.

Financial aid forms for the 1978-79 academic year will be available in the Office of Financial Aid about November 30.

you own The Chronicles of Narnia then you should buy this book.

However, one word of warning should be given. The Silmarillion is not what The Lord of the Rings was. The avid Tolkien aficionado could be disappointed if he expected too much from this book. Do not think that the reviewer is in any way displeased with the book, merely the Rings is a hard act to follow.

Kern Seeks Write-In Victory In Council Race

By Mike O'Quinn

Energetic and resourceful Roy Kern, nine-year resident of Cedarville, has thrown his hat into the political ring by announcing plans to run for one of the four open seats on the village council in the soon-to-arrive November 8 election.

In attempting to gain a position on this policy-forming body of eight, Mr. Kern's ideas for improvement, obviously spawned by a sincere love for the community, have proven both insightful and ingenious. He hopes to become a more active part of the local public by implementing his leadership qualities and management theories.

However, in order for his desire for election to prove a reality, the voting residents of Cedarville must insert his name on the write-in portion of the ballot on November 8.

Currently, much of Mr. Kern's time is occupied with the fulfillment of his responsibilities as Director of Public Relations at Cedarville College.

The nature of his work involves the scheduling, planning, and supervision of the whirlwind of events that take place on campus during the summer months. In addition to serving as editor-in-chief and photographer for virtually all printing publications that introduce the college to those who are not familiar with it, he directs the staff of ten that assists him in these activities.

As testimony to his resourcefulness and energy, Mr. Kern, despite his busy occupational schedule, has found and/or made time to contribute to the welfare and preparedness of the community by holding cardio-pulmonary resuscitation classes at the high school, and teaching first aid to the members of the fire department.

Mr. Kern is a registered paramedic and an avid photographer. Yet he is not a man driven mercilessly by his own ambition in order to satiate an inner desire for achievement; rather, he is a very versatile human being. He is the head of a warm and happy family, comprised of himself, his wife, and their daughter.

If elected, Mr. Kern would strongly advocate the attraction of additional businesses to the area. Furthermore, he is in favor of physically renovating the downtown section of Cedarville. He has a deep-seated interest in young people, and would like to see the local recreational facilities restored and expanded for the purpose of providing some structured activity for the local youth.

Of the eight members of the village council, four are stepping down this year. Mr. Kern is one of six candidates for the four open positions. Voting will take place in the American Legion building situated next to the community park in downtown Cedarville. All residents of this locality are urged to vote on November 8.

Chaplain's Corner

By Rich Young

Last week I read an excerpt from Nathaniel Hawthorne's story "The Great Stone Face." I'd like to share that with you.

Mr. Hawthorne tells of a lad who lived in a village below a mountain. Upon the mountain was an image of a great stone face, looking down so solemnly and seriously upon the people.

There was a legend that someday someone was coming to that village who would look just like the great stone face, and he would be the means of great blessing.

The story fascinated this lad, and he used to slip away and stand hour after hour looking at the great stone face, thinking about the story of the one who was coming.

Years passed and still the young man did what he had done as a boy and went to sit and contemplate the majesty and beauty of that great stone face. By and by youth passed away, middle age came, and then old age.

One day as he walked through the village someone looked at him and exclaimed, "he has come, the one who is like the great stone face!" And the angel said to them "Ye men of Galilee why stand ye gazing up into heaven?"

This same Jesus, which is taken up from you unto heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven (Acts 1:11). Behold I shew you a mystery, we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed (I Cor. 15:52) beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doeth not appear what we shall be; but we know now that, when he shall appear we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is (I John 3:2).

What fantastic promises. My question though is: "How much are we like him now?" We need to keep our eyes on him now so we will be more like him. Christ said, "If ye love me keep my commandments," and he said, "be ye perfect even as I am perfect." Keep your eye on him, and watch yourself become more like Christ!

Living Springs Expands Outreach

Dedicated to serving the Lord and ministering to the elderly, a monthly paper has blossomed from the Christian Educational Publications department of Cedarville College. This unique form of outreach is entitled "Living Springs."

In the spring quarter of 1976, "Living Springs" was begun as an independent study by an enterprising student named Joyce Coleman. Mark Highman, the present Associate Editor, took an interest and helped initiate the first copies of the publication.

Two hundred copies were printed of this first issue. Today, about 4,000 copies are being turned out for each monthly issue. What was begun as a small project is now being used in a mighty way.

"Living Springs" is now an attractive monthly paper geared to the needs of the senior citizen. Its features include a special devotional, daily Bible readings, poems, puzzles, verses, inspirational thoughts, and sometimes a continuing story. This cheerful monthly not only uplifts its readers, but also provides a source of Christian service.

With a staff of 22, many students are gaining not only experience, but an opportunity to share their faith as well. This team effort has paid rich dividends to not only those participating in the "Living Springs" ministry but also in the spreading of the gospel to a wide-spread area.

Issues are now being sent to places all over the United States and even Australia. One reader from Louisville expressed that she was "thrilled and blessed with the contents."

Truly, this literary achievement is being blessed of God in a powerful way. The managing editor, Paul Gathany, hopes to soon be printing well over 5,000 issues. Demands are running high as the word is spreading of this unique paper that reaches out to a neglected segment of our society that needs God's love.

High ranked Wilmington made it 3 in a row and Dayton stretched it to 4 with a 2 to 1 squeaker.

Intramural Football Playoffs Nearly Set

by Craig Vielguth

With a perfect 7-0 record, Units 13-20 of the New Dorms continue to lead the seven-team intramural football league.

New Dorms (1-12) and Marshall have also kept their hold on second and third place, respectively, assuring themselves of playoff berths.

Still struggling for the fourth and final playoff position are the Apartments, Carr, and Upper and Lower Williams.

The semi-final playoff round begins this week with the first game at 4:00 p.m. Thursday. The final game will be played next week to decide the team championship.

Cedarville Defeats Grace In Cross Country Meet

by Bill Abernathy

A steadily improving Cedarville College cross country team took first place in the NCCAA District 3 competition at Grace College last Saturday.

With a near perfect score of 16 (perfect is 15), Cedarville easily outdistanced Grace. The other team entered in the meet, Grand Rapids, was ineligible for team competition due to an insufficient number of runners.

Tom Yater, running cross country this year for the first time in his life, and veteran runner Brian Hull set the pace with identical times of 26:52. Two Grand Rapids men placed third and fourth, but since Grand Rapids was ineligible, this did not affect the team scoring. Cedarville runners also placed fifth, sixth, eighth, ninth, and twelfth in the race.

Yellow Jacket Starters Rest While Second String Holds On

By Mark Warren

The wheels were rolling for Kearney's spikers during the latter part of last week; while on the road they spiked their way to four victories, only suffering one loss to a powerhouse in tournament action.

Xavier was the first to fall to Cedarville, Thursday, October 27, by scores of 15-3; 17-15; 15-8; 16-14. Although the scores do not indicate a feeble fall by host college Xavier, it was just that, as Cedarville tried to play everyone on the squad, giving second string and Junior Varsity players a shot at the big leagues.

The team then traveled to Morehead State University in Morehead, Kentucky, Friday, October 28, to play in a five-team round-robin tournament. Cedarville came in second to a skilled Morehead team, losing to them, 10-15; 5-15. Head coach June Kearney stated, "They were just a big, strong, team that outpowered us."

The blue and gold spikers beat Georgetown (a small Southern Baptist School in Kentucky) very easily in two games, 15-5; 15-4.

A highlight of the tournament for Cedarville was the rematch with Rio Grande. Kearney commented, "Rio was out to get us after we beat them at the outset of the season." Cedarville triumphed in three hard-fought games, 15-9; 7-15; 15-10. "It was a good rivalry and a long game which went back and forth a lot," remarked the coach.

It was a long day as the team played all four games Friday, returning with a fine 3-1 record. With only two weeks left to play, their season record stands at 16-13.

Hockey in Top 8

By Teresa Galbreath

The women's field hockey team wound up its season last weekend by winning the consolation round of the state tournament. This placed Cedarville within the top eight teams of the state.

Cedarville lost to Wooster, 2-1, in the first game of the tournament. In the consolation rounds Cedarville beat Kent State, 1-0, and Hiram, 3-0. This brought the Jockettes' final season record to 7-8-3.

Coach Maryalce Jeremiah was "very, very pleased with the tournament," as Cedarville had never before won a game in the state tournament.

The University of Dayton won the tournament, while Wittenberg placed third, showing that the Ohio Valley League is a tough league.

In summing up the season, Coach Jeremiah said that it "established respect for Cedarville College in hockey."

Citing the late start of classes at Cedarville as compared to most other schools that the team competes against, Coach King explained this year's slow start. Last Saturday, however, everything seemed to come together as several of Cedarville's men turned in their best times of the year.

If indeed the team has put it all together, it has come at a very opportune time. Tomorrow they journey to Malone for the Mid-Ohio Conference Meet. How the team fares will have a great influence on whether they go to the Nationals.

The battle of the day will be between Brian Hull and Archie Mundy of Rio Grande. When they are healthy both are outstanding runners. It should be an exciting day.
