

4-1-2009

Cedars, April 1, 2009

Cedarville University

Follow this and additional works at: <https://digitalcommons.cedarville.edu/cedars>

Part of the Journalism Studies Commons, and the Organizational Communication Commons

DigitalCommons@Cedarville provides a platform for archiving the scholarly, creative, and historical record of Cedarville University. The views, opinions, and sentiments expressed in the articles published in the university's student newspaper, Cedars (formerly Whispering Cedars), do not necessarily indicate the endorsement or reflect the views of DigitalCommons@Cedarville, the Centennial Library, or Cedarville University and its employees. The authors of, and those interviewed for, the articles in this paper are solely responsible for the content of those articles. Please address questions to dc@cedarville.edu.

Recommended Citation

Cedarville University, "Cedars, April 1, 2009" (2009). Cedars. 513.
<https://digitalcommons.cedarville.edu/cedars/513>

This Issue is brought to you for free and open access by DigitalCommons@Cedarville, a service of the Centennial Library. It has been accepted for inclusion in Cedars by an authorized administrator of DigitalCommons@Cedarville. For more information, please contact digitalcommons@cedarville.edu.

Footer Logo

LIES 2

Dearden teaches white board class
How to stand on stage and look awkward and clueless

Vecino's announces name change
New name is He-Brews. Witty freshman wins $50.

POINTLESS 3

Students protest
Wear jean cutoffs--in Chucks.

Cedars publishes conservative opinion
First time in two decades!!!

BORING 6

Business dept. turns socialist
Publishes communist manifesto for alums: "Communique"

C-Harmony lied!
Junior class randomly hooked up students, Printy riots

SNOOZE FEST 7

Worship major discovers 4th chord
Students shocked, professors amazed

Cedarville coffee shops combine
Top potential names: Creek-N-Beans or Roasted Cream

SPECIAL FOCUS

YES,
WE'RE BETTER THAN YOU

Dress Code Reversed!

Lou Genes
-Staff Writer-

After immense pressure from high-profile donors, the trustees of Cedarville University have decided to reinstate the dress code. This time, however, the change will be much more conventional.

During an emergency meeting this week, the trustees declared that the banishment of the dress code is just another way the university is "going downhill." Coming only days after the official e-mail from the student life department, the decision for reinstatement has come "just in time."

"We can sense a difference with the students already, and they're not even wearing jeans yet. They know change is coming, and they're suddenly acting different. It's like they've lost their edge—our students no longer stand out as extraordinary.

"We can't let this continue," board member Kat Keys said.

The trustees feel that allowing jeans to be worn everyday will hurt the reputation of the campus. No longer will job recruiters be impressed that everyone is dressed for an interview; no more will students be prepared for Wednesday night church right after class.

The stigma of being a Godly, conservative college is slowly slipping away, they said. The jeans have to go.

"We need to bring back the glory days—the days before jeans, before khakis. Women need to dress modestly, and we feel that dresses are the way to do this. Men need to dress respectfully, hence, the reinstatement of the tie and collar," board member Orange Fruit said.

The new dress code will be even more severe than the most recent code. Women will be required to wear ankle-length dresses, closed toed shoes and solid colored hose.

The trustees state that an attempt must be character, not the label on their purse," Racer Rodriguez, board member and strong supporter for the change, said.

The student response has been surprisingly positive. "I'm excited to showcase my high school 4-H project dresses," one girl stated.

Her boyfriend, a pre-seminary major added his comment, "I can now dress for the future, and not feel like I am out of place. I'm excited to add to my pulpit closet."

The biggest opposition stems from the language and literature department, the student life office and theatrical departments. Known for already wearing jeans to class, many English majors are disapmade to keep our brothers in Christ from stumbling. They hope the 95 percent body covered policy will help with this cause.

Men are expected to dress in what the trustees call "pastoral wear." A collared shirt and tie are required for class, and jackets must be worn during chapel. Though, surprisingly, the men are allowed to wear sandals. "Because that's what Jesus did," the trustees said.

In an effort to keep the sexes equal, everyone will be required to use rolley backpacks.

Preparation for traveling and a counter to scoliosis were just a few of the reasons mentioned for this new rule. "The bags girls carry these days draw too much attention to themselves. We want everyone to be judged by their pointed about the new policy.

"I like to teach and read about the Ingalls family—I don't want to dress like them," Zannia Smith, creative writing professor, said about his anger toward the policy.

Dr. Orion O'Brien, vice president for student life, said he was stoked about reprising his Shane Claiborne wardrobe, with a collar, of course. "Now I guess I'll have to go with the Billy Graham look."

The policy will begin after Easter Break. The administration would like to remind students to pack their jeans for home and to return with the appropriate wear. Raiding your grandparent's closets has been suggested as a way to save money in preparation for the policy.

STUDENTS REACT TO DRESS CODE POLICY

1. Sophomore Dan Sizemore couldn't even speak. He's devastated.
2/3. SGA leaders PB & G are at a loss. "They did what?!" said Gebert. Brandt, also distraught, shaved his fohawk. At least one good thing came out of this.
4. Many students acted irrationally, including Kyle Haring, who froze in the bunny attack pose.
5. Clearly frustrated, Daniel Lewis...
6. Look at all the little heathens wearing jeans. Demerits for them.
7. Donors instructed the admins to make this the new dress code.

"I'VE ALWAYS SAID THERE IS A PLACE FOR THE PRESS, BUT THEY HAVEN'T DUG IT YET"

TOMMY DOCHERTY

LIES

'PUBLICANS EXPELLED, 'CRATS REJOICE

Write Winger
-Staff Writer-

Cedarville University administrators recently expelled all members of the College Republicans.

The College Republicans decried their dismissal in recent campuswide e-mail sent on March 16, 2009 at 9:44 p.m. The subject line read "College Republicans Expelled: No Intelligence Allowed."

Recently expelled and former President Greg B. Shoewu said, "I'm stoked they think we're smart!! Huge step forward!!!!"

Orion O'Brien explained the reasoning. He said, "It's very encouraging to see Cedarville producing smart Republicans, but if we change too much we could lose our institutional identity." The University is "open to change in areas of institutional preferences, but change just a little bit at a time," said O'Brien.

An in-depth Cedars investigation revealed that it has been at least eight years since the most recent sign of republican intelligence.

After the campuswide notification, a stifling leftist chill fell over campus as conservatives were forced underground. Due to the incredibly dense population of conservatives, the chill only managed to infect one room on the outskirts of campus, Ambassador 21—the Cedars office—before giving up in futility.

Rock graffiti and campus rumors confirmed the existence of an outspoken and fresh new organization designed to fill the void: Coalition of Concerned Conservatives United (CCCU: pronounced "kooh," like a birdie living in a big green tree saved from Dumb!' (DAD)."

Not to be outdone, the Democrats formed their own opposing underground organization: Union of Conscientiously Combined Communists (UCCC: pronounced "uckkkkk," like a republican vomiting after paying taxes).

UCCC CEO Ilu V. Change quickly countered the Republicans' negative campaign by reversing the acronym in order to provide a

"WE!" "DAD!" Shut It!

Rumors of CCCU vs. UCCC violence spilling over into the CBTS caused many faculty, staff and students to create an organization dedicated to peace and reconciliation.

"We tried very hard to incorporate both aspects of each org. so we could come to a common understanding," said sophomore Michael Haak.

This neutral organization, the Unity Campaign for Creating Common Understanding (UCCCU: pronounced "uckkooh," like a bird vomiting) has succeeded in creating win-win situations for everybody.

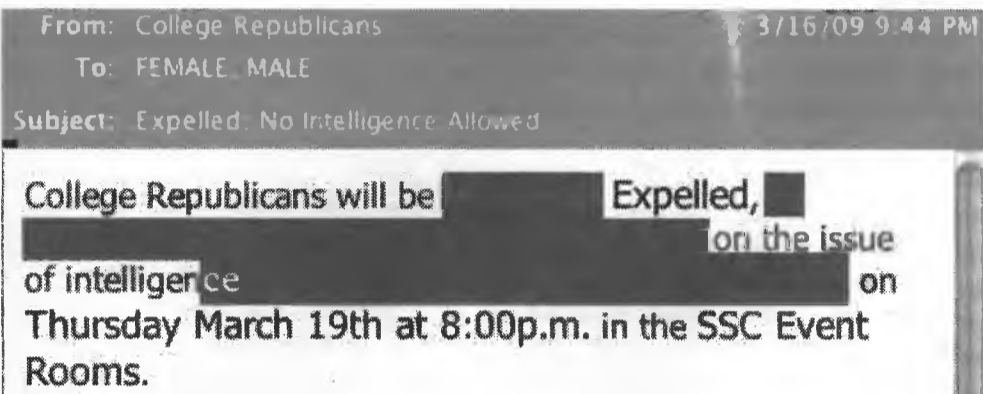

The chapel schedule also includes two regularly scheduled "chant days" where each organization is allowed to chant their slogan starting on the left with the UCCC, moving into the middle with UCCCU and then to the right with CCCU.

These chapels, appropriately named UC-CCUCCUCCCU chapels, (pronounced "uckuckkoohkooh") have reported higher attendance than Voddie Baucham's Bible Conference.

The admissions department, worried the increasing hostility may cause a drop in applications, found a positive outlet by encouraging the neutral organization to participate in the chants. Their chant, "Love Over Violence Everyday" (LOVE), has helped the chapel atmosphere.

Chants of "WE!" "LOVE!" "DAD!" now resonate throughout the chapel, replacing the formerly confusing and unintelligible "Wedad" mumblings. Together UCCCU and admissions scheduled the next two chant days for Grandparents Weekend and Father's Day.

One admissions employee said, "We found a way to take something really negative, manipulate and twist it out of context, and turn it into a wonderful recruiting tool. That's so Cedarville."

We've accurately reproduced the e-mail for your inspection.

PHOTOSHOP

global warming).

CCCU spokesperson May B. Nexttime said, "I think we've learned our lesson. Stay stupid, join the Democrats. We even made a new patriarchal rallying cry, 'Dems are much more positive saying, "Dems are Delightful!" (DAD).

After realizing the vocal similarity of their slogan, UCCC activists changed it to be more ideologically consistent, with an inclusive acronym: Whiny Environmentalists! (WE).

In a surprising and unexpected move, both groups moved their WE/DAD chants to the pre-chapel minutes of 9:55 a.m. while lights in the chapel dim.

Pastor Rohm and many students unaware of the animosity are still befuddled over the new use of the time students typically use to prepare for the chap' nap (chapel nap). "Originally I thought it was One Voice warming up, but then I found it was politics—uck—I mean ugh," said Ima N. Noyed. "All we hear is "WE!" "DAD!" chanted over and over. I'm so sick of "WE!" "DAD!" "WE!" "DAD!"

"I chose to pursue my masters at Grace because of the Prayer in Counseling class. I was very impressed with a school that put special emphasis on prayer. I have learned much about counseling, but I feel that I have learned much about myself. Even more important, by example, my teachers have shown how well Jesus has enabled them to love others. I thank God for directing me to this program."

Becky Stetson, Student

Graduate Department of Counseling and Interpersonal Relations

- M.A. in Counseling
- M.A. in Interpersonal Relations
- Scripturally based
- Focused on each student's personal & spiritual growth

CACREP Accreditation The Council for Accreditation of Counseling and Related Educational Programs (CACREP), a specialized accrediting body, recognized by the Council for Higher Education (CHEA), has granted accreditation for the M.A. in Counseling Degree in Mental Health Concentration at Grace College.

Letter from the Managing Editor:

Enjoy the Issue!!

And, go to our Web site:

<http://cedars.cedarville.edu>

NOW!!

"I WISH THERE WAS A KNOB ON THE TV TO TURN UP THE INTELLIGENCE— THERE'S A KNOB CALLED 'BRIGHTNESS,' BUT IT DOESN'T WORK"

EUGENE P. GALLAGER

POINTLESS

BUSINESS DEPARTMENT ISSUES "COMMUNIQUE" MANIFESTO

Matilda Blanche

-Staff Writer-

The Department of Business Administration has issued a new publication called the "Communique," believing that it will be an ideal opportunity to change with the times. It is no coincidence that the title looks very similar to the economic system we've all grown to love: Communism.

Department Chair Spek O. Freedom is excited about the new views the publication espouses. "If you look at the title of the publication, it's clear that this a 'unique' take on communism. So, this isn't your daddy's communism."

It was pretty much a given that even though every other department at Cedarville has headed the way of socialism, the DBA would long embrace the invisible hand of Adam Smith. After all, the department consistently churns out competent clerics of commerce year after year, equipping graduates to become supporters of supply-side economics with the ability to efficiently protect the potential rise of proletariats in the workplace.

The first signs of change in the business department didn't point to a wholesale adaptation of a new ideology. The advent of new student groups such as Women in Business showed a more accepting tone to minorities in the business major, yet requiring members to don pink T-shirts still affirmed a strong sense of patriarchy. But the reality is that mixing and matching ideologies seems to be the new pattern of action in the DBA.

The magazine title's subtlety seems to be overlooked by a number of readers. Freedom continued, "Our goal was to make sure not to show a complete Marxist bent, rather an exploration of the positives of state-owned means of production."

The DBA wants to make clear that all hope is not lost on the promise of the free market. Rather, supporting capitalism actually benefits the tenets of the communique manifesto.

These are clearly different days; in light of the Bernie Madoff scandal and taxpayer-supported bonuses to corporate bigwigs, Freedom and his colleagues believed that it was a prime opportunity to change with the times.

He points to Madoff as a clear example of the logical endpoint in capitalism.

"Do we want Cedarville to be known as the Christian school that produced many Ponzi scheme billionaires? I don't think so," Freedom said. "That's where our uniqueness comes in. We want them to distribute the profits from the scheme to every person in America."

This is the sort of seamless integration between the seemingly disparate ideologies that the DBA is emphasizing.

The DBA plans to introduce new course offerings in the fall that reflect the change in business ideology taught by two new hires, Drs. Fred Ingles and Carl Marks. A few notable classes include International Business: North Korea, Trickle-down Trotskyism, and an increase in the number of non-profit accounting classes.

Dr. Ingles explained that the key tenets of Trickle-down Trotskyism would please even the staunchest of Palin supporters. "For example, stomping out labor unions helps margins and increases profits, then everything trickles down to all people—everyone benefits, including the Proletariat. Why would anyone not like this?"

Dr. Marks stated that if such a discovery had been made earlier, the entire Cold War conflict would have been resolved in an instant when both theories were found to be completely compatible.

The new ideology is going past just the publication; it's affecting the very structure in the department. Freedom contends that valuing the new system without changing the attitudes of the faculty is "hypocritical" and "is a violation of the duty of DBA commissars."

All faculty and staff hired by the DBA (including student tutors) will be making the same yearly income. This measure shows the department's commitment to their new philosophy of business. The department has high hopes of creating the greatest innovation to economic theory since the concept of supply and demand.

SPACE THIS IS A BLANK SPACE

Music Major Discovers Fourth Chord

Helga Lichtenstymmer

-Staff Writer-

Despite its recent addition to Cedarville University, the fledgling worship major is already making great strides. Sophomore Richard Hack recently unveiled his latest discovery—the fabled fourth chord.

"I was just sitting in my dorm room, playing some of my favorite praise choruses when a burst of inspiration suddenly came over me," Hack said.

"It felt like my fingers were being controlled by some sort of outside force. I just placed them on the fret board in a combination that I had never even thought of before. With my next strum, I knew I had something new and exciting."

The entire contemporary Christian music community is abuzz with this breakthrough. Some say that this is the most significant event to take place in praise music since the introduction of the "swaying with one arm raised" dance move.

Patricia Highmore, a representative from Hillsong Music, was eager to explain the significance of this new innovation.

"For the past two decades, we've been flooding the market with worship songs using the same three chords. With the addition of this fourth chord, we should have enough material for at least another half a century."

As director of the worship program, Bill White was obviously pleased with the recent developments in the department.

"People were rather skeptical of starting this major in the beginning. If we can keep on producing quality students like Richard, I believe that the critics will be silenced."

Praise music is not the only form of Christian media that is undergoing drastic changes, though. A recent conversation with aesthetic theorist Victor Doagun revealed that many art forms are having revolutionary changes.

"It's a very exciting time for all involved," Doagun said. "We hear that directors are starting to make movies with three-dimensional characters and plots that can't be explained in two sentences. Authors are writing dialogue using high-school level vocabulary words."

"There are even rumors that Thomas Kinkade is producing paintings that include shadows in them!"

However, this change in the direction of worship music is not without its critics. When Hack introduced the new chord in chapel earlier this week, there were quite a few jeers mixed in among the applause.

"It's disgusting and unnatural," ranted junior Sarah Stuck. "I could feel something in my soul start to wither from the very first time I heard those opening strums. Change for the sake of change is never a good thing."

Many others shared similar sentiments, saying that this blatant display of individuality was not in the spirit of true worship.

This controversy did not dissuade freshman Thomas Nilmin from quickly learning the new chord.

"Dude, this is going to attract so many girls when I go to play outside Printy," he said as he practiced in his dorm room. "I wouldn't be surprised if I get asked on a Pic-a-Date before the week is over."

Hack is not through with his musical explorations yet. Shortly after his recent discovery, he quickly went back into the depths of the DMC to continue to delve deeper into the mysteries of songwriting. When asked where his research was taking him next, he relayed a story about the mythical minor scale.

Wherever his journey takes him, Hack has forever changed the face of worship music.

Transforming

"I was drawn to Grace and the area by its cost effectiveness. What's kept me here are the gifted professors. Their formidable academic knowledge has been matched only by their spirituality. They are fully engaged in ministry themselves and personally care about my spiritual development. Outside of classroom, we discuss and pray over the joys and the struggles of ministry. I receive great encouragement from them. I will continually look back on this time with deep gratitude."

Kenneth Hurne, Grace Seminary Student

A glimpse of Grace:

- Biblically Rooted
- Culturally Sensitive
- Ministry Focused
- Academically Excellent
- Spiritually Transforming

FOR MORE INFO CONTACT:
866.974.7223
GTS.GRACE.EDU

GRACE
THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

*M.A., M.Div., D.Min. on-campus programs available.
Two M.A. programs offered online.*

cedars

Cedarville's top publication since 1918

"THEY SAY A TIE IS LIKE KISSING YOUR SISTER—
I GUESS THAT IS BETTER THAN KISSING YOUR BROTHER."

LOU HOLTZ

NO POINTS

Milo of Croton

-Staff Writer-

Struggling- To name any of his teammates besides Jeff Green, Oklahoma City Thunder star Kevin Durant. Last year's rookie of the year, Durant was recently asked to name "any of the losers on his team" by a friend. After naming Green, Durant spent the next three minutes explaining that Chris Wilcox used to be on the team, until they "traded him to the Knicks for that one guy."

Competing- For the pride of being the nation's 66th best basketball team, Notre Dame, San Diego State, Penn State and Baylor. The final four teams will battle it out for the right to be the best team not invited to play in the real tournament. Other teams that earned the right to vie for that title this season included powerhouses Weber State, Duquesne, Niagara and St. Jude's Children's Hospital.

Promoted- To play a real sport, Columbus Crew midfielder Guillermo Barros Schelotto. Last season's Major League Soccer MVP, Barros Schelotto was signed to a two-year contract by the Cleveland Indians. The 35-year-old Argentinean who has never touched a baseball was informed of the contract offer last week by Indian's scout Dave Hartline. "We've never seen him play, but rumor has it he's pretty good. Besides, with a name like that, he's bound to be a good pitcher."

Boring- Any coverage of NASCAR. Despite efforts to make the "season" seem exciting, there has been no way found to make the "sport" interesting. NASCAR and news outlets have searched for compelling story lines involving grown men driving in circles, but only fights involving the slapping of helmeted drivers have brought any attention. In the end, it turns out whoever has the fastest car and doesn't crash still wins.

Exhausted- New York Yankees starting pitcher CC Sabathia. After signing a seven-year, $161 million dollar contract this offseason, the 2007 Cy Young Award winner showed up to spring training in poor shape. Two years ago, Sabathia reported to camp at 250 pounds, ballooning out to 290 by the end of last season. Sabathia reportedly collapsed after attempting to run to first base at a recent practice, where he remained, moaning about missing the brats and beer that the Brewers fed him every night last season.

Traded- Every play on the roster, by the Kansas City Royals. General Manager Drayton Moore was recently told to "shake things up" after a baseball writer reported the team had a chance to "be this year's Tampa Bay Rays." Ownership instructed Moore to "get the most out of his roster" by trading every valuable player for poorly researched prospects.

BOSSSES NAMED INTRAMURAL CHAMPS

Pheidon of Argos

-Staff Writer-

The Miracle on Ice. Buster Douglas knocking out Mike Tyson. Tiny Chaminade College's immortal defeat of NCAA No. 1 Virginia. University of Sioux Falls beating Cedarville University in the first round.

These are the kind of upsets that shake the world of sports and create lifetime memories for the fans that witness them firsthand.

But none of these upsets will ever hold a candle to the incomparable season put together by this year's men's intramural basketball champions, the Big Bosses. Led by 6-foot 4-inch center Dr. Bill Brown, the Bosses started the season picked to finish last in their B-league division.

"No one was sure we would even score a point when we got together for our first practice," said starting point guard, Dr. Carl Ruby. "I think we even surprised ourselves when we won that first game."

Fueled by 23 points from starting guard Jon Purple, the Bosses ripped The Monstars 87-21. "We all thought it was a joke when Brown walked out on the court. I mean, he's like 65," said Monstars forward Marcus O'Toole.

The Bosses would continue to upset teams in their division, including a narrow 65-62 defeat of the Harry Potter Fan Club, a team led by several quality athletes. "Everyone on that team was old enough to be my grandpa. How did we lose?" asked a troubled HPFC player after the game. "How did we lose?"

After moving into the tournament, the Bosses began to rely on the sharp play of forward Brad Smith. Teaming with Brown, Smith provided the inside presence necessary to upset A-league favorite Mr. Clean in the first round, 74-49.

"I never thought we'd win that one," said Brown. "Thankfully, the refs didn't seem to mind that Brad was getting physical in the paint."

In the second round, the Bosses needed a last second shot to knock off last year's runner-up, the Flaming Badgers. "We got the pass to [starting forward Bob] Rohm and just prayed it would go in." Rohm hit the shot with a Flaming Badger in his face, nearly blocking the shot.

"I'm not sure how he got that shot off. I was all over him," said the Badger after the game.

BORING

ROSE STRUGGLES WITH POSTSEASON BLOCK SYNDROME

Titan Cronus

-Staff Writer-

Desperate to cling to his final days at Cedarville, Senior center Daniel Rose continues to use his honed skills throughout his daily life. As the school's career leader in blocks, Rose has put his long reach to use across campus.

"All I wanted to do was throw my paper away," said sophomore Larson Edwards. "He [Rose] came out of nowhere and swatted it out of my hand."

Edwards is one of many students on campus to report that Rose's shot-blocking expertise has been carried too far. A rash of students has called Campus Safety and Coach Pat Estep, hoping someone will curtail the wave of blocked items.

"We haven't had any recycling outside of the office all week," reported university post office employee Janet Frost. "He's been out there, just waiting for those kids to get junk mail and try to throw it in the basket."

Rose was recently removed from the cafeteria by employees tired of picking up napkins tossed nonchalantly toward the trash by students. Rose was waiting around the corner, swatting the balled-up napkins back into the faces of surprised students.

"The first time I saw it happen, I thought it was cool. I oohed just like I do at the games. But when my napkin hit me in the eye, I complained to Chuck," said junior Katie Wright.

Rose was also seen in the Doden Field House last night, where he waited on the track during a women's intramural basketball game until 5-foot 3-inch freshman Deb Tannen went for a layup.

"He was like a blur. One second I had my eye on the hoop, and next I saw the ball sailing out of bounds," said a clearly traumatized Tannen.

Since the incident, Rose has disappeared. Able to easily hide on campus, Rose has been popping out all day to slam things out of students' hands and block anything reminiscent of a basketball shot.

"We don't know where he's gone," said Campus Safety Secretary Marilyn Ware.

"He's not a threat to hurt you ... unless you're crushed by a size 17 shoe."

Ware continued to rhyme about the plan, stating,

"we'll draw him out with a basketball shot ... and escape our officers, he surely will not."

If you spot Rose, be careful not to make any shooting motion. Don't take any unnecessary risks and alert Campus Safety immediately.

Two unidentified elderly athletes compete in a raucous game of pick-up basketball. The one with the ball crushed the one with long hair.

In the semifinals, the Bosses earned their spot in the championship game with a resounding 109-46 victory against third-seeded Macarena, led by 35 points and 17 rebounds by a dominant Brown.

For the finals, the Bosses drew a dream matchup, setting their sights on number one seeded LAGRIML. A perennial contender, LAGRIML was led by a number of JV basketball players and coaches. The matchup drew hundreds of fans hoping for the upset to end all upsets.

With an average age of 57.8 coming into the matchup, the Bosses seemed outclassed for the first few minutes. However, after Rohm hit a key three and Brown grabbed offensive rebounds on three consecutive possessions, momentum swung in the Bosses favor.

"I'm the happiest guy in the gym," said Brown after the game. "I've accomplished a lot in my life, but I've finally reached the pinnacle. There is no higher point for us than winning this championship."

"THE LENGTH OF A FILM SHOULD BE DIRECTLY RELATED TO THE ENDURANCE OF THE HUMAN BLADDER"
ALFRED HITCHCOCK

SNOOZE FEST

Witty Freshman Wins, Seniors Protest

Gertrude Eula
-Staff Writer-

After weeks of deliberation and controversy, Vecino's employees and SSC administrators have settled on a new name for CU's only coffee shop. After Easter break, Vecino's will refer to itself only as "He-Brews."

"We believe this new title represents accurately the unique nexus of Biblically driven theology and the process of preparing coffee grounds for consumption," said Dakota Brooke, Vecino's employee. "Whatever you do, do all to the glory of God, right?"

CU President Dr. Tegwin Dusk is equally excited about the change. "We're very interested in fostering an image of Biblical dedication, especially given recent accusations that [Cedarville University] is departing from its historic dedication to Biblical truth," Dusk said.

Some, however, criticize the change, alleging that using the universal "he" in the public sphere works only to affirm patriarchy and oppressive gender construction.

"It's absurd," Dr. Skylar Jane said, "that a Christian university would affirm patriarchy with a pronoun suggesting that only men brew or will brew coffee for our campus. What about the women working for Vecino's? Let's undermine structural patriarchy by renaming the shop 'She-Brews.'"

SSC Administrator Denim Baxter rejected the idea. "That's just silly," Baxter said.

"We're clearly gunning for a Biblical pun. The authors of the Bible referred to God's chosen people as the Hebrews, not the Shebrews. Are we to assume that God is patriarchal? I think not. So game over."

The Student Life Programs Office, in an informal survey conducted last week, discovered that most students approve the move. Forty-four percent of those surveyed said they "strongly approve" the use of the universal "he" in campus building and shop names. Thirteen percent "slightly approve" the move. Of the remaining 43 percent, 35 percent answered "I don't understand the universal 'he' concept" and the remaining eight percent split evenly between "apathetic," "slightly disapprove" and "strongly disapprove."

Last week, also, students criticized this facet of feminist theory by using the rock outside the SSC. Their messages included: "She-Brews = Wolves," "Adam > Eve," "Jesus was/is a man" and "1 Cor. 11:3."

CU College Libertarians, recently invigorated by the national rise of Texas Congressman Ron Paul, proposed a moderate solution colloquially known as the "I-Brew Compromise."

"I say we roll with I-Brew," said Rocket Rodriguez, College Libertarians member. "It avoids feminist criticism and emphasizes the importance of the unregulated individual in manifesting his—or her—own future and destiny."

The Vecino's staff was enthusiastic about the "I-Brew Compromise" until Apple spokesperson Jerry Buchanan informed the administration that "I-Brew" would constitute a trademark infringement. In a written statement, Buchanan wrote: "Come 2012, Apple will release a coffee pot that will revolutionize coffee as we know it. It will be called iBrew. Employing any variation of our well-established trademark may lead to legal action."

The administration vetoed the "I-Brew Compromise" a day later.

English professor Zannia Smith criticized the move as overly fundamental. "I don't know—why can't we just, you know—pick a normal name, something simple, maybe classy, non-controversial. Why do we feel that everything we do has to point explicitly to Biblical dedication? This sort of fear exists all around campus. Instead of erecting a simple climbing wall in the Doden Field House, for example, we have to etch a Bible verse on the side. We're too anxious."

Regardless of dissenting opinions, however, Baxter affirmed that Vecino's will officially be renamed "He-Brews" after Easter break, and those who disagree will have to "embrace the changing times."

WHO CARES?

YOUTUBE VIDEO: FUNNY CRASH COMP 11

Queen in a high squeaky voice isn't the only reason you'll say "ouch."

BEST UNUSED APRIL FOOL'S STORY IDEA

Brandt buys off Baxter— We all know Baxter would have won.

AOL RADIO: 111 WORST SONGS EVER

Your favorite could be on there, especially if you like country.

CBS AND SARAH PALIN

It's time to revisit the soon-to-be classics.

WWW.SGAVILLE.COM

SGA updates their blog.
(April Fools!)

BEST CLASSIFIEDS AD

Title: "Broke my hand in four spots, looking for hot typist."
Located under ministries/volunteer section.

TAYLOR UNIVERSITY

Graduate Programs

- Master of Business Administration
- Master of Environmental Science
- Master of Arts in Higher Education
- Master of Arts in Religious Studies

To learn more visit:
www.taylor.edu/academics/graduate

236 West Reade Avenue • Upland, IN • 46989 • 800.882.3456

Want to read the real Cedars?

Go to <http://cedars.cedarville.edu>
or visit us on Facebook "Cedars Newspaper" or on Twitter "CedarsatCu."

<http://cedars.cedarville.edu>

