

2009

I Thought Not of Insignificance

Caitlin L. Johnson
Northwestern College

DigitalCommons@Cedarville provides a publication platform for fully open access journals, which means that all articles are available on the Internet to all users immediately upon publication. However, the opinions and sentiments expressed by the authors of articles published in our journals do not necessarily indicate the endorsement or reflect the views of DigitalCommons@Cedarville, the Centennial Library, or Cedarville University and its employees. The authors are solely responsible for the content of their work. Please address questions to dc@cedarville.edu.

Recommended Citation

Johnson, Caitlin L. (2009) "I Thought Not of Insignificance," Cedarville Review: Vol. 12 , Article 7.
Available at: <https://digitalcommons.cedarville.edu/cedarvillereview/vol12/iss1/7>

I Thought Not of Insignificance

Browse the contents of this issue of Cedarville Review.

Creative Commons License

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-Noncommercial-No Derivative Works 4.0 License.

Follow this and additional works at: <https://digitalcommons.cedarville.edu/cedarvillereview>

Part of the Poetry Commons

Caitlin L. Johnson

I Thought Not of Insignificance

Taking a break from my summer reading to lay myself out on the lawn which had seduced me from the air conditioning and couch. Now, I am on my back, terrain:
a plateau of skin, hair, and 100 percent cotton.

But when I look behind the clouds into the invisible universe, I suddenly remember that the earth is being hurled through space at 67,000 miles an hour, is turning on its axis at a thousand miles each hour, and I sink my fingers into the grass and lodge myself into the dirt, thinking I might be able to feel the rotation.

And then I, twenty years old, wonder if each of us is always dizzy
from all that spinning,
and if feelings of nausea
are epiphanies in disguise.