New Residence Hall Ready for Cedarville Students

CEDARVILLE, OHIO -- Cedarville University will open a new residence hall in one week — Walker Hall — and name a townhouse constructed in 2012 — Rooke Hall — at the start of the 2018-19 academic year. Cedarville University has built several residential halls in recent years because of its rising enrollment, and 2018-19 is expected to be the largest enrollment in school history.

Enrollment in 2017 was 3,963 students in undergraduate, graduate, and online programs. It is anticipated enrollment will climb over 4,000 in the soon-to-start academic year. Faculty and staff hold their annual meeting on Friday, Aug. 10, and students begin moving into their residence halls on Friday, Aug. 17.

The university's first townhouse, constructed in 2012, is now called Rooke Hall in memory of the late Rev. Wilbur C. Rooke. Rooke was a member of the Cedarville Board of Trustees from 1954 to 1974.

Rooke pastored seven churches and served four churches as interim pastor during 55 years of ministry. He also served as secretary with the General Association of Regular Baptist Churches (GARBC) and on the GARBC's governing council. He was a board member of the Baptist Christian School of Cleveland, Ohio, and the Baptist Bible Institute (BBI). BBI and Cedarville College merged in 1953.

"Wilbur Rooke was one of my heroes of the faith," said Dr. Murray Murdoch, senior professor of history, who has taught at Cedarville since 1965. "He took a strong stand on the great doctrines of the Scripture, but always in a godly, gracious way."

Rooke Hall has been a popular housing option for graduate students and upperclassmen. The 12,000-square-foot facility has eight six-person units each with three bedrooms, two bathrooms, a full kitchen, washer and dryer and a furnished living room. Rooke Hall was constructed at a cost of $2 million.

Walker Hall, set to open in August, is named for Richard G. Walker, a longtime Cedarville employee who made a lifelong impact on students through his various staff roles.

Walker began his tenure at the university (then, Cedarville College) in 1970 in intramural recreation and food services. From 1975 until 1984 Walker served as the dean of men for the university, and in 1984 became the director of campus activities, the position he held until 2006. Walker then served families and alumni through his roles as dean of community and family life programs then coordinator for alumni engagement until his retirement in 2012.

"I think Dick Walker has probably made some of the most significant contributions of anyone who's been at Cedarville," said chancellor and former president Dr. Paul Dixon. Walker is a familiar name and a service role model to nearly four decades of Cedarville graduates.

Constructed at a cost of $3.3 million, Walker Hall features four 16-person units. Each of the spacious units includes eight bedrooms, a large living space, a kitchenette, a study lounge and a bathroom with built-in laundry.

According to Dr. Jon Wood, vice president for student life and Christian ministries, two significant goals of the university's residence life program are discipling students and building community. "We view our residence halls as places for our students to live out biblical principles in their relationships with each other," he said. "We bring that perspective into the way we design each of these unique living spaces."

Both Walker and Rooke Halls will be officially named and dedicated as part of the university's homecoming festivities in October.
