

4-22-2022

Classroom Cantos

Anastasia H. Cook

Cedarville University, anastasiacook@cedarville.edu

Follow this and additional works at: <https://digitalcommons.cedarville.edu/cedarvillereview>

Part of the Poetry Commons

DigitalCommons@Cedarville provides a publication platform for fully open access journals, which means that all articles are available on the Internet to all users immediately upon publication. However, the opinions and sentiments expressed by the authors of articles published in our journals do not necessarily indicate the endorsement or reflect the views of DigitalCommons@Cedarville, the Centennial Library, or Cedarville University and its employees. The authors are solely responsible for the content of their work. Please address questions to dc@cedarville.edu.

Recommended Citation

Cook, Anastasia H. (2022) "Classroom Cantos," Cedarville Review. Vol. 22, Article 4.
Available at: <https://digitalcommons.cedarville.edu/cedarvillereview/vol22/iss1/4>

Classroom Cantos

Description

This poem contains some of the most memorable ideas that Dr. Heath and my fellow students said during the Intro to Creative Writing class this semester.

Creative Commons License

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-Noncommercial-No Derivative Works 4.0 License.

About the Contributor

Anastasia Cook is a sophomore English major from Galloway, Ohio. Besides creative writing and reading old books, she loves riding horses and talking with young children. She is grateful for the love of God and the inspiration and support her family provides.

CLASSROOM CANTOS

Anastasia H. Cook

I

Sing to the Lord a new song.

May I sing about insects?

III

We write because

He first

wrote

us.

II

Sure.

One word can be a stanza.

It could even be a poem.

IV

And,

As usual,

I am the last one out.

Oh well.

V

The space

Between your words

Speaks.

VI

Sensory words:

What does a charred cherry taste like?

VII

First thought, best thought.

Risk it:

Write.