1996

Revel

Gareth Phillips
Cedarville University

DigitalCommons@Cedarville provides a publication platform for fully open access journals, which means that all articles are available on the Internet to all users immediately upon publication. However, the opinions and sentiments expressed by the authors of articles published in our journals do not necessarily indicate the endorsement or reflect the views of DigitalCommons@Cedarville, the Centennial Library, or Cedarville University and its employees. The authors are solely responsible for the content of their work. Please address questions to dc@cedarville.edu.

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://digitalcommons.cedarville.edu/cedarvillereview/vol1/iss1/3
Revel

Browse the contents of this issue of Cedarville Review.

Keywords
Poetry

Creative Commons License

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-Noncommercial-No Derivative Works 4.0 License.

About the Contributor (Optional)
Gareth Phillips is a junior, studying philosophy and English. He hopes to pursue graduate studies in literature and creative writing.

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.cedarville.edu/cedarvillereview

Part of the Poetry Commons

This poetry is available in Cedarville Review: https://digitalcommons.cedarville.edu/cedarvillereview/vol1/iss1/3
Revel

I am the Spirit of Autumn;
Painted eyes of ancient October fire,
Stepping out from beneath the stretching boughs,
With a shudder and a sigh of ecstasy,
I taste the wealth of the earth beneath
And the blood that flows through the sleeping trees.
Wrapped in a coat of carnival colors,
And auburn locks that catch the wind,
I breathe my soul upon the land
And draw the magic back again.
I dance, and lift my weathered boots
To stamp the chill of winter back,
And press the potent wine of fallen leaves,
Intoxicating the very breeze
That rushes on and tumbles
Over things that do not seem to be.
All that I can see is mine;
The painted skins that drift about
Like barks upon a fitful sea.
The gnarled fingers jutting up,
That creak and sway and claw the ragged sky.
The stricken, stunted stalks of corn,
Neglected by the reapers comb,
That stand all hollowed by the hounding wind
Which falls upon the field to pick the scattered bones.
The pungent smoke of fermented wood
That hangs about like a troubled ghost
Above the ash-black fire ring,
Long after the flames have ceased to sing.
Winter comes in robes of icy sleep,
But not till I have tired of the feast.
So let the torches blaze,
As I dance the silent song in hidden ways.
For I am the Spirit of Autumn.

-- Gareth Phillips