The program performed today is a sequence of compositions for horn, which will take you the listener on an aural journey from the Baroque period to the late 20th century.

Telemann’s concerto showcases the horn in its high register, presenting rapid 16th note flourishes and lovely tonal melodic lines. This combination results in a glorious display of beauty.

Mozart’s concerto is smooth and light-hearted in nature. However, Mozart’s thoughtful construction gives the piece depth of sound as well: there is beauty to behold along with the light-hearted feelings, which it will likely evoke.

Schumann’s Adagio and Allegro is dramatic music in its finest form. Extremes of high and low, piano and forte, legato and marcato, rubato and strict tempo, etc. are presented in the context of lengthy melodic material. Listen carefully to the way the piano and horn respond to one another and how Schumann uses dissonance resolving to consonance to move the piece forward.

Eurico Carrapatoso’s piece displays many qualities of the horn that previously have not been heard in this program: metallic brashness, intense glissandi, and mysterious quietness. Playful and romantic melodies can be heard throughout as well. Finally, pay close attention to the unique harmonies in this piece because you might hear something that you have not heard before now.
