Urban Concept Car on Display at National Conference

CEDARVILLE, OHIO – A team of six Cedarville University engineering students will showcase its work at the Meeting of the Minds Conference in Detroit, Michigan, from Sept. 30 to Oct. 2.

Cedarville’s team will display its Urban Concept car that it raced in July at the Shell Eco-Marathon in Houston, Texas. Shell invited Larry Zavodney, Ph.D., senior professor of mechanical engineering, and the team to display the car and showcase the students’ design in two workshop tours on the future of urban design and mobility. Other student participants will include University of Detroit Jesuit High School students displaying its two prototype vehicles.

The Meeting of the Minds Conference spotlights innovations in urban sustainability and related technology. Organized by the Urban Age Institute, the conference will host 350 invited with more than 90 percent at the vice president level or higher.
