2008

The Penny Walker

Jessica Moses
Cedarville University

DigitalCommons@Cedarville provides a publication platform for fully open access journals, which means that all articles are available on the Internet to all users immediately upon publication. However, the opinions and sentiments expressed by the authors of articles published in our journals do not necessarily indicate the endorsement or reflect the views of DigitalCommons@Cedarville, the Centennial Library, or Cedarville University and its employees. The authors are solely responsible for the content of their work. Please address questions to dc@cedarville.edu.

Recommended Citation
Available at: http://digitalcommons.cedarville.edu/cedarvillereview/vol11/iss1/1
The Penny Walker

Browse the contents of this issue of Cedarville Review.

Keywords
Poetry

Creative Commons License

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-Noncommercial-No Derivative Works 4.0 License.

Follow this and additional works at: http://digitalcommons.cedarville.edu/cedarvillereview

Part of the Poetry Commons

This poetry is available in Cedarville Review: http://digitalcommons.cedarville.edu/cedarvillereview/vol11/iss1/1
Every year on this same day a fine old-hand comes to town,
Onto West Main Street, his tattered boots rapping out the contagious sound.
Before the sun, before all else, before the dawn is whole,
Old-hand boldly blaring an alarm clock with his soles.
Sweet rhythm, sweet day for the people be,
Mr. Old Hand in his penny shoes from Fine Paradise, Tennessee.
Circus-boy face and strong-man smile—battering the street,
The children crowd and dance to best reinforce his beat.
And on his shoes, I look real close, “those ain’t no tappin’ kicks!
Old Hand’s big-band melody—copper pennies stuck to chewed gum sticks!”
Lincolns there coming down, scratching up the road,
Old Hand still tappin’ wildly in a smile fixin’ to explode.
Finally, frail tapper fails to finish tap four million forty-five—STOP!
And in his hands two socks overstocked with pennies inside.
Old Hand waits . . .
Smiles and waits . . .
Waits . . .
Until slowly his big-band smile bursts from everybody’s face.
In a bare-foot dance Old Hand ruptures, both sock ties now undone,
Flat-copper-circles spinning golden caramel in the sun.
Rust and grit and sweat and dirt twinkle just to fade,
Pennies altogether thunder—SMACK the street, down, down from their cascade.
And Old Hand laughs and looks to me, standing back in shy retreat
From wild children laughing, tossing pennies in summer heat,
“Eighty-Eight you’d think I’d learn not to make my wishing well the street,
I ain’t rich but I’ve learned that they’re useless on your feet.”