
5-19-2014

Night Watch

Eli Pyles

Cedarville University, elijahjpyles@cedarville.edu

Follow this and additional works at: <https://digitalcommons.cedarville.edu/cedarvillereview>

Part of the Poetry Commons

DigitalCommons@Cedarville provides a publication platform for fully open access journals, which means that all articles are available on the Internet to all users immediately upon publication. However, the opinions and sentiments expressed by the authors of articles published in our journals do not necessarily indicate the endorsement or reflect the views of DigitalCommons@Cedarville, the Centennial Library, or Cedarville University and its employees. The authors are solely responsible for the content of their work. Please address questions to dc@cedarville.edu.

Recommended Citation

Pyles, Eli (2014) "Night Watch," Cedarville Review: Vol. 15, Article 4.

Available at: <https://digitalcommons.cedarville.edu/cedarvillereview/vol15/iss1/4>

Night Watch

Description

"Night Watch" is an attempt to get inside the brain and heart of a typical dog. The poem does not speak to any known reality but rather to my perceptions of dogs in southern, rundown neighborhoods.

Creative Commons License

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-Noncommercial-No Derivative Works 4.0 License.

About the Contributor

I am a senior technical and professional communication major. Writing for me is often an escape, a way of stepping outside of my life for a moment and examining other worlds.

Night Watch

Eli Pyles

The dog's voice breaks in the middle of a dying night,
lifting to stars unknown,
the murmur of an old Ford,
the neighbor girl crying through her cracked window.

He puts his nose to earth,
then lifts it toward the moon,
pouring out sharp bones that prick
his undeveloped mind.
He's fending for Joni Mae—the three-year old who combs his coat and passes down her chicken under the cracked Maple table.